Johnson Puts "Non-Eagle" Trades Under Single Code

Basic Pact Is Issued to End NRA Work of Organizing.

Administrator Starts Vacation

Flies West on Speaking Tour; Board Takes Over Duties.

A basic code for virtually all of American industry still operating outside of NRA, which employs about 2,500,000 of the Nation's 24,000,000 industrial workers, was issued yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

The recovery administration cleared the way for bringing uncodified small industry under the broad wings of the Blue Eagle within 30 days and then departed by plane for a combined vacation and speaking tour in the West.

Three choices were left open to uncodified industries by Johnson. They may:

1. Merge with kindred existing codes.
2. Adhere to the new basic code.
3. Or take their chances on having a code imposed at hearings to be held in 40 days for industries which "appear to be harboring abuses of labor."

Consolidation Plan.

Johnson also announced a long-range plan for consolidation of all NRA codes, existing and future, into the lowest possible number, probably 300 for the immediate future.

About 475 industries already have been granted separate codes. Pacts for 262 others are pending. Of the 262, about 135 industries have submitted codes which either have passed public hearings or are in such a stage that agreement is regarded as imminent. The 135 are not expected to be blanketed under the basic code.

Officials declared the 475 industries already in the NRA fold contain at least 90 per cent of the country's employed manpower.

A committee named by Johnson to direct completion of code making will be headed by Robert K. Straus, special assistant to the administrator. He is the son of Jesse I. Straus, Ambassador to France, and a protege of Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State. Straus will be aided by Leon Marshall and George S. Brady, assistant administrators for policy.

Typical of uncodified trades likely

Roosevelt Ship Through Canal

Executive Dinner Guest of President Arias of Panama.

Balboa, Canal Zone, July 11 (AP). President Roosevelt crossed the Panama Canal today, forging another link in his historic good-will and inspection tour of American possessions and South America.

Under bright skies after rainy weather had prevailed most of the day, the Houston came into dock shortly after 4 p. m., having made a speedy six-hour crossing from the Atlantic.

The President's ship was received with cheers of a large crowd and a salute from the cruiser New Orleans, which will become its new convoy.

The President left his ship tonight to motor to the Panama republic palace for dinner with President Arias.

Standing on the fore superstructure with Secretary of War Dern and his two sons, Franklin and John Roosevelt, the President showed intense interest in the canal.

Late tomorrow the President plans to start his 12-day journey across the Pacific to Hawaii.

Death Stay Denied Condemned Youth

Arizona Gas Execution Is Scheduled Tomorrow.

State Prison, Florence, Ariz., July 11 (AP).—George J. Shaughnessy, 19-year-old adopted son of an Albany, N. Y., couple, who is sentenced to die at dawn Friday in Arizona's lethal gas chamber, was denied a stay of execution today by the State board of pardons and paroles.

Shaughnessy will be the third to meet death by Arizona's new method. He was convicted for murder of Lon Blankenship, Tucson automobile dealer, a year ago.

Shaughnessy shot Blankenship and robbed him when the automobile man offered him a ride between Nogales and Tucson.

Ponzi Gets Hearing Today.

Boston, Mass., July 11 (AP).—Gov. Joseph B. Ely announced today that Charles Ponzi, erstwhile financial wizard, would be given a hearing on his petition for pardon tomorrow, the same day immigration officials have demanded Ponzi's surrender for deportation to Italy.

500 Jobless As NRA Threat Closes Plant

Firm at Fredericksburg Ordered to Restore $200,000 in Wages.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 11 (AP). In the face of an order from the National Compliance Board of the National Recovery Administration to restore nearly $200,000 in wages to its employes or face the loss of its Blue Eagle and possible prosecution, the G. & H. Clothing Co. closed its factory here today.

About 500 workers were thrown out of employment. Plant officials said that the factory, a unit of L. Grief & Bro., Inc., of Baltimore, would be closed indefinitely. It is the first time the plant has suspended operations in 21 years.

Two other Grief units, at Staunton, Va., had not received orders to close down today.

Ten plants, located in Virginia,

Driver Stops for Decoy Purse; 2 Cars Wrecked

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—A decoy pocketbook in the middle of the road near Waynesboro, Pa., was the cause of two automobiles being wrecked.

J. Quenton Spiker, Miss Beatrice Alexander and Miss Louise Monahan, of Frostburg, and Raymond Baer, of Cumberland, were driving to Sabillasville to visit David Alexander. A Pennsylvania automobile stopped suddenly ahead of them when the driver saw the pocketbook. The Frostburg car crashed into the car ahead. All the occupants suffered from shock and bruises. Children had placed the pocketbook with string attached on the highway.

Army to Keep in Contact With Space Expedition; Landing Arranged.

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 11 (AP).—As the stratosphere expedition remained earthbound today, a prospect not expected to change within 24 hours at least, elaborate plans were being prepared for keeping in touch with the balloon in flight.

Officers of the Seventh Army Corps Area who have studied prevailing winds in this territory believe the gondola will alight somewhere in eastern Nebraska, Iowa or Illinois. At a number of points in that area men trained in mooring balloons will be stationed. Civilian Conservation Corps ambulances will be ready for emergency use.

Throughout the flight the Army authorities will be in communication by radio with the stratosphere climbers. When the word that the balloon has landed is received, Maj. Harvey S. Burwell, air officer at Omaha, will fly to the spot.

Crew Is in Training.

The crew for the flight spent the day in strict physical training routine to keep in good condition for their adventure.

Sven Hedin Captive Of Moslem Bandits

London, July 11 (AP).—Dr. Sven Hedin, noted Swedish explorer, is being held by bandits in Central Turkestan, according to a dispatch from Peiping to the Daily Mail.

It was reported that Hedin and 12 companions were seized by the Moslem general, Ma Chung Ving, and that they are captives in an inaccessible camp in the region of Aksu.

The retreat was regarded a bandit stronghold, and officials of the Chinese government and the British consulate at Kashgar said that sending a rescue expedition would be extremely difficult. Hedin was laying out a route for a highway across central China.

Los Angeles Is Condemned; Navy's Future Policy Studied

The Navy's "Dowager Queen of the Air," the Los Angeles, was yesterday branded by experts as being unfit for further duty in the skies.

The 10-year-old craft, which holds a transoceanic speed record and which has been flown from coast to coast and into tropics on maneuvers, was ordered condemned by Secretary of the Navy Swanson.

At its Lakehurst base, the Cabinet official said, the craft would be used for scientific experiments on the ground. He explained that the airship had been condemned because of "deterioration of materials."

This decision leaves the Navy with only one dirigible, the Macon, which officials, according to Mr. Swanson, are studying to determine the future policy for the employment of lighter-than-air craft in the service.

"We are trying to ascertain," the Secretary explained, "whether the dirigible is advantageous to the fleet and worth the expense. We do not want to waste money, yet we want to be prepared."

Built in September, 1924, by the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, Germany, the craft was flown here as the ZR-3 by Capt. Hugo Eckener, later of Graf Zeppelin fame. It made the distance of 5,066 miles in 81 hours. The craft came to the United States as a partial reparations payment.

The craft later was flown to this city, where it was christened the Los Angeles by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

During its faithful service, the Los Angeles saw the commissioning of the ill-fated Shenandoah and Akron and has cruised extensively with the Macon.

The Los Angeles was a blimp in size, compared to the gigantic Akron and Macon, and it quickly lost favor. Months elapsed and it swung unused and unsung at its moorings at Lakehurst. Age bit its ribs and its waterproof coat cracked.

Secretary Swanson said a group of scientists at the Goodyear dirigible base at Akron had requested the craft be turned over to them. He said they wanted it for experimental purposes. What they would find, he said they told him, might be valuable in future airship construction.

"I told them they could have her if they could get her to Akron," Mr. Swanson said. He said he had refused to place the craft back into commission so that it might be flown there.

Transatlantic Airway Urged By PWA Fund

Commerce Bureau Asks Seadromes or Refuel Bases in Report.

Declaring heavier-than-air service between Europe and the United States is inevitable, the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce, yesterday urged establishment of a trans-Atlantic airway through use of refueling air bases or seadromes.

Recommending that PWA funds be made available to the bureau for the project, the annual report of the department (until July 1, known as the "aeronautics branch") issued yesterday, said:

"As the PWA is providing funds for Federal projects to foster employment, it is felt that this is an opportunity for the United States to anticipate by five or ten years such a reality and at the same time own and operate the airway for equal use of all nations."

Seen as Self-Supporting.

Pointing out, further, that 80 per cent of the project's cost would be for labor, the report, issued by Eugene L. Vidal, director, said that operation of such an airway "would be self-supporting and would solve the problem of tremendous gas loads and small pay loads now of such concern in long-distance flights." The PWA now has the matter under consideration.

Reviewing accomplishments during its first year of activity, the bureau selected as its greatest achievement its successful maintenance and operation of Federal

First Lady Flies West, May Visit Mrs. Dall

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—Mrs. Franklyn D. Roosevelt soared westward by air tonight, her destination unrevealed.

It was believed, however, that she might stop at Reno, Nev., and visit her daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, who has established a residence there prior to filing for divorce from Curtis Dall, New York broker. The plane on which she was a passenger will stop at Reno.

Gardener's Body Taken From Eastern Branch

Police last night recovered the body of Edward Lasanska, 42, of Hickey lane northeast, who drowned yesterday afternoon while swimming in the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River near the Benning powerhouse.

Frank Scherzey, a neighbor of Lasanska, who was with him, told police he was swimming toward the bank and saw Lasanska following him, but when he looked again a few seconds later Lasanska had disappeared. Scherzey said he heard no outcry or struggle. Lasanska was a gardener employed by the Government.

Packing Workers Walk Out.

Salt Lake City, July 11 (AP).—Between 60 and 100 employes of the North Salt Lake plant of the Cudahy Packing Co. walked out today, demanding increased wages, a minimum 32-hour week and the right to affiliate with a union of their own choice.

Dollfuss Arms For Ruthless Fight on Nazis

Emil Fey Stepped Down While Warning Hitler of "Anarchy."

Vienna, July 11 (AP).—As a preliminary to a ruthless campaign against Austria's bomb-firing Nazis, Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss today concentrated the full military and police powers of the country in his own hands.

The vigorous little chancellor became a sort of second Mussolini as he reorganized the cabinet and made himself minister of foreign affairs, minister of defense and minister of agriculture, in addition to being chancellor.

Emil Fey, formerly vice chancellor, and later minister of security, was stepped down to the position of "general commissar for extraordinary security," in which capacity his duties will be to carry out the orders of Dollfuss, acting in the capacity of minister of security.

Hitler Is Warned.

Fey began his new job with a vitriolic editorial in his newspaper, Abendzeitung, in which he warned the Hitler government in Germany that Austria realizes that "anarchy" prevailed in the neighboring Reich.

Therefore, said the editorial, Austria must safeguard itself, and "the time has come to consider what's to be done to extinguish the center of contagion. It is not surprising that the wildest rumors are circulating in Berlin, including reports that France is preparing to march into Germany."

The editorial concludes with a warning to the German Reichstag that if it "associates itself with June 30 (the day of the "Purge"), it will mean a catastrophe for Germany."

The Austrian foreign office, however, cautioned correspondents that Fey's attack is not to be regarded as a semiofficial attack on Germany. The spokesman pointed out that Fey's new job is purely domestic and has nothing to do with other nations.

Death Warning.

The cabinet shake-up was interpreted in many quarters as amounting to elimination of the Heimwehr (Fascist Home Guard) from a position of power, but spokesmen for the organization pointed out that Prince Ernst Reudinger von Starhemberg, one of their leaders, remains as vice chancelor, even though Fey appears to have been demoted.

As he changed the cabinet—by means of a general resignation and a new list—Dollfuss announced that the death penalty will be imposed hereafter for mere possession of explosives.

The result of the warning was watched for with interest, since each

Three Killed In Auto Crashes

Wiliam E. Burke, 20, D. C. Basket Ball Star Among Victims.

Three persons died yesterday as a result of automobile accidents in the Washington area.

The dead:

William E. Burke, 20, former Central High School and George Washington University basket ball star, who died in Casualty Hospital of injuries received in a crash near Seat Pleasant, Md., June 17.

Lloyd C. Jenkins, 23, and J. H. Jenkins, 24, both of Bena, Va., who met instant death when their truck swerved 200 feet from the roadway and smashed into a telephone pole on the Richmond-Washington highway 8 miles south of Alexandria, Va., yesterday.

Burke's death resulted from a complication of injuries—internal, crushed spine and fractured collarbone. He was with a party of four, riding in a car driven by Gene Swift, 1419 Columbia road, also a Central basket ball star. They were returning from an outing at Plum Point.

Lloyd Jenkins, driver of the death truck, is believed to have fallen asleep as he and the older Jenkins, his cousin, were returning to Bena from Baltimore.

Burke is survived by his mother, Mrs. Pearl A. Burke, and two sisters, Mrs. Laura M. McDonald and Mrs. Pearl M. O'Connell, both of Washington.

Lloyd Jenkins leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Jenkins, of Bena. J. H. Jenkins is survived by his mother, Mrs. Alice Jenkins, also of Bena.

Pair Dump Welcher's Body on Police Steps

New York, July 11 (AP).—A bookmaker—described by police as a "welcher"—was shot to death today and his body was dumped from his new auto in front of a Brooklyn police station. He was tentatively identified as Richard Kantor, 45.

Police expressed the belief that Kantor may have known he was "on the spot" and that he was slain in front of the police station as he sought to obtain protection. The two men jumped from the car and disappeared in the heavy traffic.

4 Shot in Strike Riot; Dock Employers Agree To Plan for Arbitration

Escaped Girl Convict Is Trapped and Slain

Former Waitress Makes Good Boast She Never Would Be Taken Alive; Sentenced for Shooting Two Men in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Ark., July 11 (AP).—Making good her boast that she never would be taken alive, Helen Spence Eaton, 22-year-old slayer of two men, died under the fire of a trusty guard 7 miles from the Jacksonville women's prison farm near here late today.

She made her fourth escape from the farm late yesterday.

The comely brunette, clad in overalls, a man's shirt and men's shoes, fell before the shotgun charge of Frank Martin, who with B. O. Brockman, deputy superintendent of the women's prison farm, was searching for her after she was reported to have invaded a farm house in an attempt to force a farmer's wife to provide her with transportation.

The guard and Brockman saw her walking along the road near the farmhouse.

The trusty said he called upon her to stop and that as he called, she reached for a pistol. He fired once, Martin said, and she pitched forward.

The girl convict escaped yesterday by feigning illness as she worked in a strawberry patch with other prisoners. Gaining permission to enter the house for medicine she did not return, but made off with the night watchman's pistol.

Bullets of Militia Disperse Prowlers

Marine Unions Accused of Having Broken Three Truces.

San Francsico, July 11 (AP).—A proposal to arbitrate the Pacific Coast strike of 27,000 waterfront workers was accepted today by the employers while the threat of a general strike, affecting more than 100,000 union workers, strengthened hour by hour.

San Francisco, July 11 (AP).—Struggling to avert a general walkout of upward of 100,000 union workers which became increasingly likely in the face of fresh shooting and other violence on Pacific Coast water fronts, President Roosevelt's Labor Disputes Board announced today it would hold an election among striking marine workers to choose union representatives in future negotiations.

Buckshot from police guns wounded four strikers at Portland, causing a situation described by authorities as "desperate."

National Guard bullets whizzed again last night on the San Francisco Embarcadero, as militiamen dispersed a gang of prowlers.

A citizens emergency committee in Seattle requested the use of State police to drive "alien agitators" from the city.

General Strikes Demanded.

Growing demands for general strikes in San Francisco, Oakland and Portland were heard as President Roosevelt's board worked for a last-minute truce.

The board still awaited answers from both shipping men and strikers, as to whether they would submit the various issues to Federal arbitration. Unions began taking strike votes.

The disputes board concluded its informal hearings of both strikers and shipping men, after listening to a statement by Thomas G. Plant, representing the employers. Plant informed the board the shippers would "cooperate fully" in negotiations.

Nation Urged To Hear Hitler Defend Purge

Government Radio Stresses Importance of Speech Tomorrow Night.

Berlin, July 11 (AP).—The Nazi government's radio was turned into a powerful organ today to announce over and over again the importance of the speech Chancellor Hitler will make to the Reichstag Friday night and urge every German to listen to it.

This move emphasized the importance attached by the government to the explanation Hitler will give of his suppression of the "Roehm revolt" on June 30 and the events of succeeding days.

To make certain that every one has a chance to hear the speech, it was announced, loud speakers will be placed in public places.

At the same time there were strong indications that a "White Book"—reminiscent of World War days when governments pleaded their cases in varicolored volumes—will be issued, probably in time for publication immediately after the speech.

In that event, it is possible that Hitler may touch on the crisis only in broad general terms, leaving it to the government document to supply the details.

Industry Leader Removed.

The Reichstag, which is 100 per cent Nazi, will meet at 8 p. m. Friday, an unusual hour for the session, but convenient to the general public, to which Hitler's address apparently will be mainly directed.

A move by Minister of Economics Kurt Schmitt toward perfecting the country's economic organization along Nazi lines was the only development of major importance to-

Imperial Valley Heat Rises to 122 Degrees

Brawley, Calif., July 11 (AP).—Today was the hottest day ever recorded in Imperial Valley, with a reading of 122 at the Government Weather Bureau in Imperial. In Brawley, the Government thermometer rose to 120.

A Government report on the Colorado River flow showed only 2,400 second feet, the lowest mark known.

Ivy Lee Fee From German Trust Bared

Rockefeller Publicity Man Gets $25,000 Yearly as Policy Adviser.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Evidence that Ivy Lee, prominent public relations counsel, is receiving $25,000 a year from the German dye trust for services which include advice on German rearmament, was presented today to the Congressional sub-committee investigating un-American activities.

Lee is in Europe, but testimony which he gave the committee at a private hearing was read into the record before a packed audience. It was corroborated on the witness stand by Burnham Carter, one of his partners.

Reports from Lee's office, supposedly on American reactions to German governmental policy, were transmitted to the dye trust in Berlin. However, the reports included suggestions as to German policy on armament and other matters, the testimony showed.

Quiz Called Travesty.

Some 500 spectators who jammed the hearing room broke into applause at one time when Chairman McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts), ordered the attorney for Ernst Schmitz, head of the German railway and tourist office in New York, to leave his client and go back into the audience.

Hope Forsaken, Death Nearing for Loffler

Hope for the recovery of Charles A. M. Loffler, found at his Silver Spring home early Monday with a pistol wound in his head, was abandoned yesterday at Garfield Hospital. His family was summoned.

Loffler, who is 57, is the president of a meat company here. Shortly after he was wounded he was given a blood transfusion and rallied slightly, but later suffered a relapse.

Lupe, Suing, Says Her Tarzan Off the Screen Is Still a Brute

Los Angeles, July 11 (AP).—Picturing her movie Tarzan as a violent, cursing, furniture-wrecking husband, Lupe Velez, vivacious Mexican screen actress, filed divorce proceedings here today against Johnny Weissmuller, screen actor and Olympic swimming champion.

Only last night she announced they had separated.

Charging cruelty, Miss Velez asserted her Tarzan "cursed, swore and threatened his wife" and that he "broke and destroyed furniture in the home and some of the articles struck the plaintiff and caused severe cuts and lacerations."

The screen actress asserted Weissmuller's conduct in the presence of strangers and friends caused her to become "ill and nervous" and resulted in "great grief and mental suffering." She said she had become unable to perform in the films in the manner required by her employers.

The marriage of the mercurially tempered Lupe and the bronzed athlete has produced a series of temporary separations invariably accompanied by voluble explanations.

Last Saturday Lupe and Johnny returned from an Eastern trip, with the little actress vowing she would "scratch out plenty of eyes if anybody say me and Johnny bust up."

"I no like to be tough guy," she said then, "but some day I get mad. It gives me gooseflesh. We come East, Johnny stop off in Washington to play golf, and some papers say we bust up. Johnny, on his way back here, see these papers, and he say, 'what the h—l is thees?'"

Less than 48 hours later they began disagreeing again. They separated on Monday and Weissmuller moved to the Hollywood Athletic Club. Lupe remained in their Beverly Hills home.

Lupe and Johnny eloped by airplane to Las Vegas, Nev., October 8, 1933, and were married shortly after the swimmer had been divorced by Bobbe Arnst, dancer, on cruelty charges.

2 Women Die In Club Attack

Oakland Boarding House Keeper and Friend Are Victims.

Oakland, Calif., July 11 (AP).—A mysterious intruder crept into the bedroom occupied by two elderly women in a boarding house here, beat them to death with heavy blows over their heads, ransacked the room and vanished.

The bodies of Miss Adella Merrill, 73, owner, and Miss Millie Foote, 64, were found by an occupant of the dwelling today.

Police theorized robbery was the motive for the double killing, but Mrs. Daniel Harris, who discovered the bodies, said Miss Merrill, who was attacked and severely beaten by an intruder last March 1, later received threatening postcards and telephone calls.

Two other women besides Mrs. Harris were in the dwelling, but said they had not heard any cries for help. They said Miss Foote slept with Miss Merrill, who feared the intruder might return.

Doctor Admits He Broke Law to Save Baby; Freed

Danville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—A charge of irregular parking preferred against Dr. Samuel Newman was dismissed in police court today when the physician, indignant at having received a ticket, informed Magistrate Carter that it was a question of complying with the law or letting a baby die.

A child had swallowed kerosene, the doctor said, and he left his car in a safety zone near his office, unable to find another parking space in order to treat the infant quickly. Dr. Newman said he would do the same thing again and had done it before. He contended that doctors should be exempt from traffic rules.

Woman Attack Victim Dies, Suspect Released

Fresno, Calif., July 11 (AP).—Mrs. Bertha Blagg, 37, died today of head injuries inflicted July 2 by an unidentified assailant, who crushed her skull in criminally attacking her.

Death came 20 hours after the release of Clayton Stone, 13-year-old Fresno boy, whom Mrs. Blagg accused of the attack. Attending physicians said she was mentally incapable of remembering the identity of her assailant because of the injury to her brain.

Peace Boards Marking Time In Labor Wars

Republic Steel's Voiding of Labor Agreement Bomb to Whole Industry.

While the threat of an increase in strikes and labor strife grew more ominous yesterday, two of the newly created labor mediation boards withheld decisive action while the third continued its efforts to end the longshoremen's strike in San Francisco.

Although the refusal of the Republic Steel Corporation to renew contracts with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers admittedly is potentially explosive for the entire steel industry, the special Steel Board created by President Roosevent held aloof for the present.

Labor Department officials said the case had not been formally placed before the board and that the board contemplated no immediate intervention as there had as yet been no strike or outbreak. The board, it was said, is still engaged in a study of the entire steel labor problem from data submitted by the Amalgamated association.

The National Labor Relations Board continued studying the 100 cases turned over to it by its predecessor, the Labor Advisory Board, but withheld any announcement of decisions on important questions of policy until after a conference with the chairmen of 20 regional boards the last of the week.

Chairman Lloyd Garrison of the board said his group would not interfere with the negotiations of the special mediation board which is trying to settle the longshoremen's strike nor with any of the steel industry's labor problems because of the existence of the Steel Board.

The threat of a general strike was reported hanging over Minneapolis and St. Paul last night after workers were said to have accepted and employers rejected a proposal offered by the regional labor board.

United Textile Workers at Birmingham were expecting to reach a decision Sunday as to whether 20,000 of them would strike for higher wages, to compensate for a reduction in the work week from 40 to 30 hours.

A proposed settlement of the Akron rubber workers' strike was rejected, and minor strikes were in progress in Fall River, Mass.; Fort Worth, Tex., and among Great Lakes tugmen.

Woman Alleges White Slavery

Charles Wyland Is Held Under $10,000 Bond Pending Probe.

Reports of an active "white slave" ring in Washington were being investigated last night following the arrest of Charles Leo Wyland, 33.

Wyland, held on a Mann act charge, was taken into custody after complaints by Miss Ruth Comley, 28. She told Assistant District Attorney Louis Whitestone that Wyland brought her here from Baltimore.

Miss Comley claimed that since 1929 she had been a member of a "troupe" which traveled throughout the country under Wyland's direction. She said she was prompted to tell her story to authorities because Wyland had forced her to return a pet dog, "of which she had become very fond."

Agents of the Department of Justice were asked to aid in the investigation of Wyland's activities. The whereabouts of two other women, named by Miss Comley, is being traced.

Wyland is held under bond of $10,000.

Food Vessels Sail For Alaska, Ending Threat of Famine

Seattle, July 11 (AP).—Food-laden ships steamed toward Alaskan waters today and worry over a threatened famine in the north was at an end.

Volney Richmond, sr., of the Northern Commercial Co., which has trading stations scattered through the territory, said there were shortages at many points. Meat supplies had become exhausted and other staples were dwindling.

Two weeks ago, Richmond said, many interior points he visited only had a food supply sufficient to last about 30 days, but the citizens were worrying for fear the ships tied up by the Pacific Coast longshoremen's strike would not be released in time to bring them new stores.

The possibility of a famine, Richmond explained, lay in the fact that more than 90 per cent of Alaska's provisions must be imported.

Tighe Nearing End as Leader Of Steel Labor After 35 Years

Young Organization Group Said to Be Picking a New Slate.

Pittsburgh, July 11 (AP).—The end of 35 years of steel union service seemed near for Michael F. Tighe tonight as reports went out that the aging president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers will retire.

Sources close to the organization disclosed the younger and more progressive members, allied with a "rank and file" group, are picking a new slate of officers.

These names must be presented to the union by July 15, and under regular procedure would have to be voted on in a referendum in September, when Tighe's present term expires.

The 72-year-old leader, who is attending wage conferences of his organization with the Western Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers Association, declined comment other than to say:

"I have not yet reached a decision. In a few days I will make a statement regarding it."

It was said he would like to retire because of his age, but his final decision will be based largely on what he feels are the needs of the union.

Those under consideration for the union's offices by the "rank and file" element are said to be:

George Williams, president of the Canonsburg Lodge of the Amalgamated, for president; L. A. Morris, of Canton, Ohio, and Roy A. Kelsey, of Gary, Ind., for vice presidents; William J. Long, leader of the Weir-Cove Lodge, for secretary-treasurer, and Jack Byers, of Indiana Harbor, for managing editor of the Amalgamated Journal, union newspaper.

It was largely through Tighe that the recent Nation-wide strike threat was averted.

Young Democrats Plan Trip to Shore

Atlantic City Excursion Set for July 21 and 22.

The Washington chapter of the Young Democratic Club of America will hold a two-day junket to Atlantic City July 21 and 22.

The trip will be made via the Pennsylvania Railroad in special cars. Swimming and other summer sports will form an important part of the outing program.

J. Raymond Nunan, administrative assistant of the PWA and chairman of the resolutions committee of the club, is in charge of arrangements for the outing. He is being assisted by G. V. Wickware, Crawford Sloan, Helen Durkin and Ruth Berman.

eral strike, the board again called upon the employers and then planned to confer with the San Francisco Labor Council's strike strategy committee of seven members, and strikers' representatives.

Declaring the employers had "been willing to do everything that is fair and just to bring about a settlement," Plant said three agreements already had been reached, but declared the strikers had repudiated them.

The clash at Portland resulted in critical injuries to two striking longshoremen. Peter Stevenson was shot in the abdomen and shoulder and Elmus W. Beatty wounded in the neck. Bert Yates and W. Huntington were reported to have suffered minor wounds.

Police Fire on Pickets.

Police fired into a group of pickets who hurled rocks at a locomotive cab and then endeavored to uncouple the cars as the train crews attempted to run the train through a blockade of strikers.

"Shots came at us from the bushes and our men opened fire," said F. M. West, assistant chief of police. "It was either defend ourselves or get shot, and the police decided to shoot."

Ninety police were on the train, and West said rocks were thrown at them before shots were heard.

airways on a budget $2,400,000 less than Congress provided for the 1934 fiscal year, when total funds available were $5,200,000. The bureau had been operating annually with expenditures of more than $8,500,000.

Other Accomplishments.

Other 1934 accomplishments listed included promotion and issuing of bids for a volume-produced, low-priced airplane selling at $700; employment of 50,000 men on relief airport projects; sponsoring of legislation for public hearings seeking causes of accidents, and analysis of needs of noncommercial airmen with particular reference to license requirements.

The air navigation division, headed by Rex Martin, operated 20,000 miles of airways with 30 per cent less funds, provided emergency landing field facilities with radio equipment at 50-mile intervals, and generally modernized aids to air navigation throughout the country.

Private flying was stimulated through changes in the air regulation division, headed by Col. J. Carroll Cone. Pilots' licenses of amateur grade were created, aircraft engineering rules were revised to encourage manufacturers to bring out new models, and airline operation efficiency was increased through new rules specifying multi-engined aircraft on all lines carrying passengers in interstate commerce after dark. Inspection of all lines included specification of types of equipment necessary for airline operation under peculiar conditions of terrain.

server, climbed the rock walls surrounding Moonlight Valley. He has made the almost vertical 450-foot climb in eight minutes. Maj. William E. Kepner, pilot, and Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, alternate, went through their calisthenic paces.

After studying an unpromising weather map, Maj. Kepner said the flight will not be tomorrow.

Capt. Stevens, who has worked continuously for weeks installing delicate instruments in the gondola, took his first real relaxation last night by giving a dinner-dance at a nearby "dude" ranch for the flight personnel, Army officers and scientists at the camp.

Assistants at the camp lashed to the to the bottom of the gondola an inflated "bumper" of balloon cloth, designed to break its fall and protect the delicate instruments at landing.

The metal sphere was then moved from its shed on an especially constructed truck trailer, rehearsing operations by which it will be rolled under the 3,000,000 cubic foot balloon just before the take-off.

Cave-in Death Probe Called

Responsibility to Be Fixed Monday in Gravel Bank Tragedy.

An inquest will be held at Capitol Heights, Md., Monday night to establish responsibility for the death Tuesday afternoon of Walter Berry, 18, EWA worker, who was crushed to death when a gravel bank caved in near Seat Pleasant.

Prince Georges County police said that, although Berry's death, in all outward respects was accidental, an inquest was necessary because financial responsibility might involve the Emergency Works Administration and the State Roads Commission.

Acting Coroner Thomas D. Griffith will preside at the inquest, to be held at the Capitol Heights Volunteer Fire Department headquarters.

Meanwhile, it was reported at Casualty Hospital, that Benny Glover, 16, also injured in the cave-in of the bank, was improving.

Alliance Dissolved By Colored Voters

Affiliation of the Independent Voters Political Welfare Organization, a group of colored voters with branches throughout Maryland, and the Fraternal League of America was dissolved last night by the welfare group because of a recent league indorsement of David I. France for United States Senator and H. Webster Smith for Governor.

A special meeting was called for this purpose at 2931 Eleventh street northwest, resident of John L. Jenifer, president of the welfare group.

Jenifer pointed out that his organization is independent politically and is concerned less with politics colored voter. He declared the welfare group withheld indorsement of candidates until it had obtained public pledges of approval of policies politically advantageous to the colored race.

Southeast Area To Be Heard by Commissioners

Citizens to Show How They Feel Neglected in Civic Program.

Improvement needs of Southeast Washington will be studied at first hand by the District Commissioners this afternoon under escort of a group of business men of the section.

Clarence F. Donohoe, president, and Charles H. Jenkins, secretary of the Southeast Washington Business Men's Association, will head the escort of citizens who will show the Commissioners why they complained their section was neglected in favor of other sections when improvements were made.

A formal hearing will be given the citizens at a meeting of the Board of Commissioners at 10 a. m. tomorrow, following the inspection tour this afternoon. The complainants will have, at the hearing, the support of the Board of Trade on some, at least, of their proposals.

Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, chairman of the bridge committee of that organization, asked to be heard on the need for new bridges over the Anacostia River.

The tour this afternoon was arranged by Commissioner George E. Allen and Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, following complaint by the Southeast Business Men's Association at a meeting at which an 18-point improvement program was approved.

Commissioner Allen, after a conference with Maj. Gotwals, issued a general public invitation to that and any other group of residents of any section to call on the Commissioners with complaints and improvement programs. The tour this afternoon and the hearing tomorrow morning was the result.

$35,549,000 Capital Budget Approval Seen

Chairman of House Group Says Present Total Appears Fair.

A Federal appropriation of $5,700,000 and a total District appropriation approximating the $35,549,000 carried in the current appropriation act will be acceptable to the next House, it was predicted yesterday by Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), Missouri.

The prediction of the Missourian was made after conferences with District officials preliminary to preparation of estimates for the next fiscal year.

Representative Cannon is chairman of the House District Appropriations sub-committee and as such has powerful influence over District fiscal affairs.

It was at the instance of Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, and Mr. Cannon that the Federal appropriation this fiscal year was cut to $4,334,000, despite an effort by the Senate to have the figure fixed at $5,700,000. The reduction represented 70 per cent of an advance to the District by PWA. The Commissioners insisted it was an outright grant, such as wwas given to various States. The House insisted 70 per cent be repaid this year.

Makes No Flat Predition.

"It is, of course, too far in advance to make any flat prediction concerning the District or any other appropriation bill," Representative Cannon said. "Neither can I undertake to commit the District Appropriations Sub-committee of the next House.

"The District appropriation act for the current year, however, seems to me to be a fair one and one which met with general satisfaction. I do not believe the House would seek to reduce materially the appropriations for next year.

"The question of the Federal appropriation is not likely to come up for dispute. That question, I believe, was settled in the course of consideration of the current law.

"The amount agreed on, $5,700,000, taking into consideration repayment of the public works advance, will be acceptable to the next ouse in my opinion."

May Include Center Funds.

Inclusion of an amount sufficient to start construction of the Municipal Center may also be acceptable to the ouse, Mr. Cannon said. Much will depend on the course of the District finances in the current fiscal year and what District Commissioners feel are the most urgent needs for next year, he added.

Public hearings on budget estimates begin September 10 and will continue daily until all interested groups have been heard. The September 10 date was fixed so that District residents could voice their views before the estimates had to be turned over the Bureau of the Budget.

Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, already is gathering preliminary data on the estimates. Following his conferences with Representative Cannon he has begun conferring with officials of municipal departments.

Department heads have not been given a definite date for turning in their estimates but these are to be completed and made public some time before the public hearings. The estimates have not been made public in the past except during a short period when the Citizens Advisory Council, an unofficial body, was functioning.

Father Slays Trio, Then Kills Himself

Boston, July 11 (AP).—A morose letter carrier, who brooded over troubles of his 19-year-old daughter and her 21-year-old husband, shot both to death today, killed their 6-month-old daughter and ended his own life.

The dead were John I. Gidney, 55, described by acquaintances as unhappy since the death of his wife last October; his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Borgeson, 19, who attended Teachers College for two years before her marriage to Ernest R. Borgeson, 21-year-old unemployed mechanic, from whom she had recently been living apart, Borgeson and Marie Estelle Borgeson, their 6-month-old daughter.

consul and a $1,750 "cut" of $6,000 a month the German railways were paying to the publicity firm of Carl Byoir.

Lee's testimony showed he had been receiving $4,000 a year ago, when the $25,000 agreement was made with the German headquarters. Services he gave for the money consisted only of advice, he said.

Opposed Nazi Activity.

"I religiously refused to distribute propaganda in the United States," he asserted. "In the first place, I thought it would be futile, and in the second objectionable."

"I also advised against any stimulation of Nazi activity here. I told them last January that it was very bad business."

Lee said he told Joseph Goebbels, German propaganda minister; Franz von Papen, vice chancellor, and other German leaders, "they would never in the world get the American people reconciled to their treatment of the Jews."

Lee and his firm are public relations counsel for John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil Co. of New York, the Pennsylvania Railroad and other prominent companies.

Son's Salary $33,000.

Lee disclosed that his son, James Lee 2d, is his "contact man" in Berlin at a salary of $33,000 a year, paid by the father.

Dr. Ernst Hafstaengel, Hitler aid, who has recently been in this country, was described by Lee as "a sort of handy man around the chancellery, without any official position."

Lee said he had met Chancellor Adolf Hitler "just as any foreign traveler would meet him, and he made me quite a speech." So far as he was aware, he said, Hitler knew nothing of his contract with the dye trust.

day during the political lull preceding the Reichstag meeting.

Schmitt removed Phillip Kessler as leader of the Reich industry and trade, replacing him by Count Ruediger von der Golz, a thorough Nazi with considerable experience in industry and business.

Press Attack Praised.

Business circles regarded Kessler's removal as resulting from his lack of sufficient experience for carrying out industrial organization, in which little has been done recently.

The German newspapers today applauded in their editorials the criticism of the foreign press voiced yesterday by Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in his radio address on the reports of the suppression of the revolt.

Numerous orders from high officials throughout Germany during the day called attention to "rumor mongering," and warned against the spreading of false reports.

U. S. Seeks Way to Halt War Of Man and Nature on Birds

Extinction of Waterfowl Feared by Wallace as Shortage Grows.

The hands of both man and nature have turned against wild life, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said yesterday in pleading for a truce in the slaughter of water fowl.

His message was delivered to 20 men steated around a table seeking a formula for the preservation of bird life—particularly ducks—for oncoming generations of sportsmen. The Bureau of Biological Survey summoned this conference of conservationists because it fears bird life may go the way of the buffalo.

The 20 experts comprising the migratory bird act advisory board heard Wallace warn of selfish sectionalism.

"Too much evidence of selfishness and sectional benefits in your findings," he said, "will surely jeopardize the future of the board. Any recommendation which looks at only one branch of this dilemma and not the other one will be unsatisfactory."

J. N. Darling, Biological Survey chief, pointed out that human beings and nature were both against bird life. Human beings, he said, are using automatic and pump guns, and he said a referendum of the Nation's sportsmen may be taken to determine whether such weapons shall be allowed. Nature's weapon in the slaughter of bird life is drought.

Duck breeding areas most severely affected by the drought, it was said, will produce only 5 per cent of their normal birds this year. There also is a 90 per cent shortage of breeding stock.

The Biological Survey hopes to meet the crisis by establishing bird refuges and preventing over shooting.

All 'Non-Eagle' Trades Are Put On Single Code

to be brought under the basic code are the pretzel and circus industries.

Johnson said the objective of the basic code was to clean up drafting of pacts and free NRA personnel "to concentrate promptly on the work of administering the codes in force."

On Tuesday Johnson revealed he hoped a commission or board would be named to manage NRA when it passes into the administrative phase of its existence.

Wage and hour provisions of the basic code were left unfixed with the understanding that they "shall be those already approved for the proper kindred industry."

The basic code guarantees collective bargaining for labor, bans child labor, provides for the safety and health of workers and establishes a system of open price reporting, with authorization for other fair trade practices if desired by 75 per cent of the members of the trade and approved by the administrator.

Code Board's Power.

Under the plan, the Government will pay the expenses of a code authority for the basic code, which remains to be appointed. Any industry complying with the basic code, however, would have the privilege of requesting appointment by Gen. Johnson of a separate code authority, the expenses of which it would finance on a pro rata basis.

The basic code authority would be empowered to enforce compliance, obtain an yinformation it deemed necessary from a member, supervise proce reporting and recommend existence of emergencies warranting the fixing of minimum prices.

Basic code signers would be required to file with a code authority agent a price list to become effective immediately. The prices would be distributed among all members of the industry simultaneously. As price revisions are filed they, too, will become immediately effective.

Existing NRA price policy was adhered to by Gen. Johnson when he ruled in an order supplementing the code that "willfully destructive price cutting is an unfair method of competition and is forbidden."

Another provision gives code authorities 14 days in which to decide whether a filed price is destructive after holding a hearing on complaint of any member of an industry.

No Fixed Minimums.

The order made plain there would be no fixed minimum prices except in cases where the administrator declared an emergency existed.

After an industry complies with the basic code it may ask for modification of any fair practice provision or inclusion of new requirements.

Additional rules promulgated by Johnson to complete code making included:

1. The minimum rates of pay provided for in Article II of said basic code shall apply, irrespective of whether an employe is actually compensated on a time rate, piecework, or other basis.

2. Female employes performing substantially the same work as male employes shall receive the same rate of pay as male employees.

3. No employer shall permit any employe to work for any time which, when totaled with that already performed for another employer or employers exceeds the maximum permitted herein.

4. No employer shall reclassify employes or duties of occupations performed or engage in any other subterfuge so as to defeat the purposes or provisions of the act or of said basic code.

5. No employer shall dismiss or demote any employe for making a complaint or giving evidence with respect to an alleged violation of the provisions of any code of fair competition.

6. Code authorities selected by industry in accordance with Article IV of said basic code shall function at the expense of the industry in accordance with such further rules and regulations as the administrator may prescribe.

7. No provision hereof, of said Administrative Order No. X 61 or of said Basic Code, shall supersede any State or Federal law which imposes on employers more stringent requirements as to age of employes, wages, hours of work, safety, health and sanitary conditions, insurance, fire protection or general working conditions, than are imposed thereby.

8. No provision hereof, of said Administrative Order No. X 61 or of said Basic Code shall be so applied as to permit monopolies or monopolistic practices, or to eliminate, oppress, or discriminate against small enterprises.

Gen. Johnson was accompanied on his trip to the West by his secretary, Miss Frances Robinson. He will speak tonight in Waterloo, Iowa. He also has talks scheduled in Portland, Ore., Los Angeles and Chicago. He may accept other speaking invitations while absent from Washington. He expected to return early next month.

Ahearn Withdraws In Tammany Race

New York, July 11 (AP).—Edward J. Ahearn, one of the three leading candidates for the leadership of Tammany Hall, withdrew tonight in favor of James J. Dooling, who is said to have the tacit support of the Administration.

Ahearn's unexpected move left the race, which will end Monday at a meeting of Tammany district leaders, between Dooling and Stephen A. Ruddy.

Although Ruddy is making a stiff fight, Dooling was seen in many quarters as the probable winner because Tammany workers are eager for Federal patronage, which so far has been denied.

New NRA Basic Code

Article. I.

To effectuate the policies of Title I of the National industrial recovery act, the following provisions are established as a basic code of fair competition which shall govern every industry applying therefor in accordance with Administrative Order No. X-61, dated July 10, 1934.

Article II.
Section 1—Hours.

No employe shall be permitted to work in excess of ——— hours in any one week, except that for ——— weeks in any one calendar year any employe may be permitted to work not more than ——— hours per week. All hours in excess of ——— per day or ——— per week shall be paid for at not less than one and one-half (1½) times the employe's regular rate.

Section 2—Exceptions.

The provisions of section 1 shall not apply to employes engaged in emergency maintenance or emergency repair work involving breakdown or the protection of life or property, nor to persons employed in a managerial or executive capacity who earn regularly thirty-five ($35) dollars per week or more, nor to any other class of employes which the administrator shall find upon application of true representatives of the trade or industry should be subjected to an exemption or modification in accordance with NRA policy; provided, however, that employes engaged in such emergency maintenance and emergency repair work shall be paid at one and one-half (1½) times their normal rate for all hours worked in excess of forty (40) hours per week.

Section 3—Minimum Wages.

No employe shall be paid in any pay period less than at the rate of ——— per week for ——— hours of labor, except in ——— in which region no employe shall be paid in any pay period less than at the rate of ——— per week for ——— hours of labor.

Section 4—Wages in General.

All wages shall be adjusted so as to maintain a differential at least as great in amount as that existing on June 16, 1933, between wages for such employment and the then minimum. In no case shall there be any reduction in hourly rates; nor in weekly earnings for any reduction in hours of less than 30 per cent.

Article III.
Section 1—Child Labor.

No person under 16 years of age shall be employed in the industry in any capacity. No person under 18 years of age shall be employed at operations or occupations which are hazardous in nature or dangerous to health. The Code Authority shall submit to the administrator for approval before October 1, 1934, a list of such operations or occupations. In any State an employer shall be deemed to have complied with this provision as to age if he shall have on file a valid certificate or permit duly signed by the authority in such State empowered to issue employment or age certificates or permits, showing that the employe is of the required age.

Section 2.—Apprentices.

The hours and wages of regularly indentured apprentices in skilled trades or occupations of the industry may depart from the standards hereinabove prescribed; provided that the terms of employment and the course of instruction of such apprentices shall conform to standards uniform throughout the trade or industry and approved by the administrator.

Section 3.—Handicapped Persons.

A person whose earning capacity is limited because of age, physical or mental handicap, or other infirmity, may be employed on light work at a wage below the minimum established by this code, if the employer obtains from the State authority designated by the United States Department of Labor, a certificate authorizing such person's employment at such wages and for such hours as shall be stated in the certificate. Such authority shall be guided by the instructions of the United States Department of Labor in issuing certificates to such persons. Each employer shall file monthly with the Code Authority a list of such persons employed by him, showing the wages paid, to, and the maximum hours of work for such employe.

Section 4.—Safety and Health.

Every employer shall make reasonable provision for the safety and health of his employes at the place and during the hours of their employment. Standards for safety and health shall be submitted by the Code Authority to the administrator for approval within six months after the effective date of this code. The standards approved shall thereafter be a part of this code and enforceable as such.

Section 5.—Required Labor Clauses.

The provisions of section 7 (a) of said act are hereby incorporated herein by this reference and shall be complied with.

Article IV.
Administration.

This code shall be administered by the general NRA code authority which shall be selected pursuant to, have the powers specified in and function in accordance with administrative order X-62, dated July 10, 1934; provided, however, that, on approval by the administrator, any industry so desiring may elect its own code authority to have powers and to function in the manner prescribed for the general NRA code authority and under such rules and regulations as the administrator may prescribe.

Article V.
Trade Practice.

(a) It shall be an unfair method of competition for any member of any trade or industry subject hereto to violate any rule of fair trade practice for such trade or industry even if not herein contained when approved by the administrator, or, in the case of trade practice provisions for trades or industries under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture when approved by such Secretary, on application concurred in by seventy-five (75) per cent of the members of such trade or industry.

(b) Prices, rebates, discounts, commissions and conditions of sale shall be filed as prescribed in administrative order No. X-62, dated July 10, 1934, and it shall be unfair method of competition to violate or fail to comply with the terms of that order.

Article VI.

Section 10 (b) of said act is hereby incorporated herein by reference and this code is expressly made subject thereto.

Johnson's Code Statement

The text of the statement by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, on the new basic code for industries as yet unaffiliated with NRA follows in full:

"By virtue of authority vested in me as administrator for industrial recovery under Title I of the National industrial recovery act, and in order to provide a simple means of giving a code forthwith to those industries remaining uncodified who desire a code and in order thereby to free NRA for administration of approved codes, it is hereby ordered that:

"1. This plan is available to any industry not yet codified under said act (with the exception of industries, including local service trades, for good cause designated by the administrator for different treatment). Any such industry may apply to the administrator for codification by application of the basic code (Exhibit "A," annexed) as the code for such industry. The hour and wage provisions to be included in said basic code, as to any applicant industry, shall be those already approved for the proper kindred industry, as determined by the administrator, after due consideration of representations of the applicant industry, and other relevant data. An uncodified industry, instead of applying for the basic code, may apply for consolidation and complete coverage by the existing code for the proper kindred industry, subject to stay as to applicant industry of provisions then inconsistent with policy.

"2. If any such application is made by a truly representative body of the industry and if there be no objection by any party in material interest after ten days, published notice to all concerned, such code shall, without further hearing, reference to advisory boards or other adminstrative action become effective ten days after its approval by the administrator, in industries employing less less than 50,000 persons, or by the President in all other industries.

"3. All uncodified industries which desire codification excepting those specially designated as above) are requested so to apply for such basic code or for consolidation with codes for kindred industries. If, after the approval of such application for any industry, it desires additional fair trade practice provisions or modifications as to such industry of the basic code, or the code with which consolidated, such industry may apply therefor at any time and will be accorded a prompt hearing and determination with respect thereto. Any industry which desires to consolidate under a code of a kindred industry may do so on approval of the administrator even after becoming subject to the basic code.

"4. It is not intended by this plan to force all remaining uncodified industries under codes, but as to any such industry not yet codified which does not apply for such basic code, or for consolidation as above, within 30 days after the date hereof and in which the administrator shall determine that wages, hours and conditions of labor constitute an abuse inimical to the public interest and contrary to the policy of said act, the administrator shall within 40 days days after the date thereof provide for a hearing in accordance with Section 3 (d) of said act to determine whether a code covering hours of labor, rates of pay, and other working conditions shall not be prescribed thereunder."

Magistrate Appointed.

Leonardtown, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Charles Mattingly, of Pearson, has been appointed magistrate of the Eighth District of St. Marys County to succeed Harry Wise, resigned.

Picketers Face Sign Law Trial

Judge Given Considering Cases of Anti-Nazi Protest Marchers.

Three counts, alleging violation of the District sign regulations, were under consideration by Judge Ralph Given yesterday following the Police Court trial of three reputed "picketers."

Joe Zameres and Sarkis Avadakian, described by police as communist agitators, were arrested July 6 during a demonstration in front of the German Embassy. In court yesterday they were charged with carrying banners "protesting" against the Hitler regime in Germany.

The placards were introduced as evidence. They read: "We protest the murder by the Nazi regime of workers and Jews. We demand the release of Thaelman, leader of the German working class, and Down With Fascist Terror!"

Police said Zameres and Avadakian were marching up and down the sidewalk carrying the banners. The defense contended that District sign regulations covered only advertising matter. Judge Given reserved decision pending further study of the charges.

He is also considering similar counts against Joseph King, labor representative, who faced trial for allegedly picketing a downtown clothing establishment.

Guard Traps, Kills Escaped Girl Convict

Her Fourth Break Ends in Death for Slayer of Two Men.

telephoned authorities at Jacksonville.

A note found in the girl's locker at the prison farm pointed to the tragic end she met. It was written on the back of a rejection slip from a popular magazine to which she had offered a story and said: "To whom it may concern: I'll never be taken alive."

Mrs. B. C. Brockman, superintendent of the women's farm, said Helen had written several detective stories and now and then tried her hand at poetry, but that none of it ever had been accepted for publication.

Killer of Two.

The body of the girl lay tonight in the brushwood where it fell, pending a coroner's inquest.

Before she entered the farmer's home no trace had been found of the pretty former waitress who shot her father's alleged slayer to death as he was on trial for murder and later cut short the too-ardent attentions of a Dewitt restaurant man with a pistol bullet

The girl convict's previous escapes have been short lived, light-hearted affairs, more in the nature of a two or three day pleasure jaunt to Little Rock than serious bids for freedom.

She first was sent to prison for the slaying of Jack Worls, shot to death in a crowded courtroom in Dewitt as the jury was about to retire in his trial for the slaying of Helen's father, Cicero Spence, a riverman. She received a five-year sentence which the Supreme Court later reduced to two years.

While awaiting the outcome of her appeal she was questioned in the killing of Jim Bohots, restaurant operator at Dewitt, for whom Helen worked as a waitress. The questioning revealed nothing and the slaying of Bohots was charged off as "unsolved."

A year ago she was released on parole and came to Little Rock. She had been here but a short time when, seized with remorse, she surrendered to Little Rock authorities and confessed the killing of Bohots. She was sentenced to ten years.

NRA Threat Closes Plant; 500 Jobless

Maryland and Pennsylvania, constitute the Grief holdings. The central office is in Baltimore.

The order from NRA instructed the company to pay to its employes sums representing the "differential" between the minimum code requirements and the levels set by the Men's Clothing Code Authority. The firm was given until July 19 to make the restitution or be deprived of its Blue Eagle. In addition, the compliance board said it was prepared to ask prosecution by the Department of Justice.

Plant officials here said that they had no statement to make other than that the plant would remain closed indefinitely.

Dictation Charged.

In Baltimore, however, a statement was issued by the company, which said the firm had been cited "not for failing to pay minimum wages, because they have always paid the minimum wage scale and better since the establishment of the men's clothing code, but for refusing to allow the men's clothing code authority to dictate the wages to be paid above the minimum to all their employes."

The company's statement charged that the order involved "not only the constitutionality of certain provision of the National recovery act, but the attempt of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and Sidney Hillman, its president, together with manufacturers affiliated with it, to so dominate and control the men's clothing industry as to force all manufacturers into this union or out of business."

Slacum Reelected To Cambridge Post

Cambridge, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—James A. Slacum, city councilman, will retain his seat on the town board as a result of the election today in the Third Ward, in which he defeated Guy McWilliams by four votes. His opponent received 109 votes.

Only 547 of the 1,200 voters in the Second Ward were able to cast their ballots on account of the crowded condition of the polling place, and it is reported that the election of H. Maynardier St. Clair, present incumbent, will be contested by Charles Cornish.

Leaders Study Traffic Conditions

"Artificial Blood" to Save Thousands of Lives Held Near Memphis, Tenn., July 14 (AP).—An experiment which scientists hope may lead to the perfection of "artificial blood" has been making steady progress at the University of Tennessee's College of Medicine here.

Dr. O. W. Hyman, dean of the college, revealed today that Dr. W. R. Amberson, head of the department of physiology, has worked on the experiment for three years and that rapid progress has been made during recent months.

If the experiment, still in the early stages, is successful, it may revolutionize operative surgery, save thousands of lives and bring the cost of blood to within reach of countless patients unable to pay for transfusions.

A cat whose veins were entirely filled with the "artificial blood" lived for 36 hours recently, Dr. Hyman disclosed. The experiment also has been partially successful in the case of dogs. The scientists plan to try monkeys next, since monkey blood is nearer human.

A member of the university staff explained the experiment.

Dr. Amberson, he said, takes ox blood from a slaughter house and breaks it down to get the hemoglobin. This ordinarily is contained within a cell, but Dr. Amberson's method removes it.

The substance then is mixed with Ringer's solution, which is the serum, or salts, of the new blood. The mixed solution is about like blood except that the hemoglobin is outside the cells.

The experimenters still are at a loss to speculate concerning the possibility of making the artificial fluid into the four types of human blood, but the process has greatly increased the flexibility of the experimental laboratory.

D. C.-San Diego Flight Lauded

Lieut. W. G. Tomlinson's 15-Hour Hop Brings Commendation.

Lieut. William G. Tomlinson, U. S. N., was commended yesterday by Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, upon the former's delivery of a new Navy scouting plane at San Iego, Calif., 15 hours after leaving Anacostia, D. C. The flight was made Tuesday.

"Your flight from Washington to San Diego during the daylight hours of July 10, to deliver a plane to San Diego, is a highly commendable effort in keeping with the traditions and spirit of the Navy," Admiral King radioed Tomlinson. "On behalf of the officers of the bureau, please accept my congratulations."

Lieut. Tomlinson's flight was made as a part of the regular schedule in ferrying planes from coast to coast. His trip was the first to be accomplished in a standard Navy plane. The ship was a Grumman.

D. C. Driver Held For Jury in Death

Frank Lancaster Arraigned at Jersey City.

Jersey City, N. J., July 11 (Spl.). Frank Lancaster, of the 1900 block Fourteenth street northwest, Washington, was held for the grand jury without bail on a manslaughter charge when arraigned today before Judge Paladeau in the Third Criminal Court, this city.

An automobile operated by Lancaster struck and fatally injured Peter Pinch, 35, of Jersey City, at an Erie ferry boat slip on July 2.

Lancaster will be arraigned before the grand jury later this week, officials stated.

Moffett Gets Quarters for Housing Work

New Postoffice Building Selected; 2 Bureaus Are Disappointed.

After a three-day search, space was found yesterday for the Federal Housing Administration in the new Postoffice Department Building.

To provide this space, Secretary of Interior Ickes said he had to oust one of his bureaus and disappoint two governmetnal agencies that had been promised better quarters. Mr. Ickes has charge of Government quarters both here and in the field.

James A. Moffett, housing administrator, in the meantime, had rejected governmetnal and private buildings.

Under the new arrangement, the Housing Administration will occupy 25,000 of the 37,000 square feet utilized by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Postoice Building. The remainder will go to thel Federa Communications Commission, which also will occupy the space assigned the Radio Commission, which it absorbed.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs will be moved to the Hurley-Wright Building, Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The Interior Department's subsistence homestead division and the Tennessee Valley Authority, which were expected to be transferred to the new Interstate Commerce Commission Building, will remain in the Architects' Building and Temporary Building F, respectively, as their promised space will go to the runover of the Federal Communications Commission, Mr. Ickes said.

U. S. Balloon to Fly At Birmingham,

Lieut. Charles Kendall to Piot Navy Craft.

A Navy entry will be flown in the National elimination balloon race at Birmingham, Ala., July 28, it was announced yesterday at the Navy Department.

The gas bag will be piloted by Lieut. Charles Kendall. Lieut. Howard Oriville will serve as aid. Both are from the Lakehurst Naval Air Station.

Ickes Defends PWA Handling In Year Review

Secretary Deplores Demand for More Speed in Reply to Critics.

Reviewing the first year of the Public Works Administration, Administrator Ickes last night answered critics who have contended this agency has caused the National recovery program to lag.

"Public works can not and should not be a slap-dash affair," he said in a radio address. "To the impatient, and I am one of them, they seem to start with a glacial slowness, but they also move on with glacial sureness."

The PWA "has made errors, but it has learned its lessons and corrected its mistkes as it has gone along," he continued. "It is an agency that fights the battle for recovery on many fronts. It is proving effective in brnging fundamental changes in our economic situation, which will be slower to be recognized than the more obvious physical improvements themselves."

Employment Doubled.

More than three-fourths of all public works projects are now under construction or contract, he asserted. Employment on construction sites has doubled since March 1 along with the overage weekly expenditure of PWA funds, now about $30,000,000. He said more than 4,000 projects have been completed.

This statement served as an indirect reply to those in NRA who have felt that the delay in revival of heavy industries has been due in part to slowness in getting PWA projects started. NRA officials say that they have been able to restore employment in consumer industries to a large extent, but that the original plan depended upon PWA for stimulus in the Capital goods manufacturing.

One of the tasks to be undertaken by Donald H. Richberg, in his new post as director of the Industrial Emergency Committee, will be to aid in speeding up activities in this sector of the recovery front.

Much Cash Still Unpaid.

Despite the statement of Secretary Ickes, that more than three-fourths of all public works projects are under construction or contract, the Treasury Department's daily balance sheet shows that of allocated funds only a comparatively small part actually has been paid out.

In loans and grants to States and municipalities, PWA has paid out in cash only $81,557,000, leaving unexpended up to now $478,502,000. Under the miscellaneous heading, PWA has paid out in cash $138,600,000, leaving an unexpended balance of $716,195,000.

"Despite the fury and the clamor of the past twelve months, PWA has adopted and clung to certain principles that can never be popular, especially with the politicians," Mr. Ickes declared.

Among the principles cited by the administrator were that "even an emergency does not justify uneconomic or wasteful public works construction" and that "repayment is expected and reasonable security is required" on all PWA loans.

Proud of First Year.

"PWA will not encourage localities to become hopelessly bankrupt, no matter what may be the attitude of the officials of these localities," he added.

As all of the non-Federal portion of the $400,000,000 recently made available to the PWA by the President is practically exhausted, the Secretary said "t is inevitable that thousands of applicants are doomed to disappointment and the country might as well realize this situation now."

Concluding, he said: "The future policy of the United States with respect to public works will be determined in due course by the proper authorities. The record of the first year fo the PWA has been made. Considering the magnitude and variety of the task and the lack of precedent to serve as a guide, we are proud of that record."

Ships Are Ordered For Haiti Marines

Evacuation of Island Is Set by August 15.

Ships from the United States Fleet, to bring the American Marines out of Haiti by August 15, were ordered made available yesterday by Admiral William Standley. Navy transports which ordinarily would perform the task are in Asiatic waters.

There are 47 officers and 517 men to be brought back. Most of these will be stationed temporarily at Quantico, Va. The removal of the troops is in accordance with an order of President Roosevelt.

Traffic Safety Drive Awaits Conscience Car

100 "Observers" Selected to Report Minor Infractions.

Plans for Washington's "safety conscious" drive were discussed yesterday at a luncheon of traffic and business officials in the National Press Club.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, after hearing a report from Capt. Milton D. Smith and Sergt. Walter H. Thomas on the traffic system in Pittsburgh, Pa.—called "America's Safest City"—announced that final arrangements are nearing completion.

Enactment of a new system governing downtown traffic awaits delivery of the "Voice Conscience" automobile, Maj. Brown declared. The auto, painted white, and equipped with a loudspeaker, will cruise throughout the city while its crew warn motorists of traffic infractions.

The "observers" plan of checking traffic violations will be inaugurated when the machine is placed in service. Maj. Brown has completed his list of 100 "observers," picked from business and civic leaders, who will report minor violations of traffic laws.

irector of Traffic William A. Van Duzer and members of the Washington Board of Trade complete the "safety conscious" campaign committee.

Veterans Back D. C. Vote Plan

V. F. W. Indorses Proposal Advanced by Allen for Recall.

A legislative plan to enfranchise District residents is being advocated by the District Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, according to Nathan D. Golden, department commander.

Golden favors a plan conceived by George E. Allen, District Commissioner, which calls for passage by Congress of legislation providing for the possible recall of District Commissioners. The exercise of this opportunity by residents would provide them with means of registration and voting, giving them representation.

Allen recently announced his readiness to campaign for a Congressional resolution which would pave the way to granting Washington residents representation in both Houses and the right to vote in Presidential elections.

Convict in Teahouse Murder Questioned

James Wallace, convicted of participation in the Bladensburg teahouse murder nearly three years ago, was brought to Marlboro, Md., yesterday to idetnify two other men accused in the case and to testify before the grand jury.

The other men are Joseph D'Alesandro, arrested in New York, and James Orlando, arrested in Philadelphia. States Attorney Alan Bowie declined to say whether Wallace identified the two men held in the Marlboro Jail. Wallace's appearance before the special session of the grand jury was assumed to be in connection with the tea-house murder, in which one man was killed and five wounded during a holdup.

2,250,000 Jobs Given by U. S. To Help Nation

(Associated Press.)

Emergency appropriations are estimated by Administration officials to be giving employment to more than 2,250,000 men and women at the present time.

Governmental chiefs made the estimate yesterday in surveying the Administration's summer drive to put the dollars into the pockets of those who have been idle. Mostly the jobs are of the pick and shovel kind.

Complete figures are lacking. The total number varies constantly with shifting projects. However, officials expressed satisfaction with the showing made with the billions put into the emergency tills by Congress.

They said approximately 590,000 were at work under Public Works construction jobs. This number, Public Works officials said, will be stepped up considerably as money goes out from the $500,000,000 set aside just before Congress went home in June.

Million Aided.

In addition to these thousands directly employed, Public Works officials estimate more than a million receive work indirectly through the manufacture, transportation, &c., of materials needed in construction.

Mr. Roosevelt has been striving for months to stir new life in the heavy goods industries by pushing both public and private construction. To augment the public works undertaking he obtained from Congress power to start a home building and repair campaign. With the Government guaranteeing loans and making some loans, officials said they hoped 5,000,000 men would fin djobs when the drive is in full swing.

Yesterday's reports to the Bureau of Public Roads showed 27,000 on the job at 4,860 road projects. These projects are being expanded. Another 40,000 have or will find work under a $50,000,000 appropriation for use in forests, National parks and Indian reservations.

Officials said 250,000 young men were in Civilian Conservation Corps camps with another 100,000 to be added. Recruiting now is in progress, with 50,000 to come from the midwestern drought area.

All told, the CCC has $335,000,000 in sight with which to pay the youths $30 a month.

Drought Relief.

Congress appropriated $525,000,000 for drought relief. Not all of this, however, will go directly for that purpose. But the intention is to give as much work as possible to farmers whose crops were ruined. Relief grants are to be held to a minimum.

More than $7,000,000 is paid every week directly to about 1,000,000 men and women employed by the Emergency Works Administration, successor to the Civil Works Organization.

Officials said there were other thousands employed by emergency funds, but figures were not complete. Among these works they listed the Naval building program under Public Works Funds and activities undertaken by the Biological Survey and other Governmental units.

Police Investigate Auto Crash Death

Cresaptown Farmer Was Hit June 24.

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (Spl.). An investigation is being made by county authorities into the death of Addison K. Twigg, 47, farmer of Cresaptown, yesterday in Allegany Hospital, where he was admitted June 24 after being injured by an automobile.

Twigg, according to State Police, was struck by a car driven by Raymond Graham, of Cash Valley, as he walked on the National highway near Locust Grove late on June 24. The driver, at the time of the accident, told police Twigg stepped in front of the machine.

Besides his widow, he leaves 10 children; two sisters, Mrs. Mollie Castle, of Cumberland; Mrs. Ella Pine, of Martinsburg, W. Va., and a brother, Sherman Twigg, of this city.

Action on Airport Awaited at Bristol

Bristol, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—The Bristol Chamber of Commerce today awaited replies from Washington officials to its inquiries concerning prospects for Bristol's airport approval.

Disappointed in the delay of inspection of the field, local leaders have written the Department of Commerce and its inspector, A. W. Card; the Postoffice Department, and S. A. Cisler, superintendent of rail and air mail service, and Senators Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, and Kenneth D. McKellar, of Tennessee.

Salisbury Tries Fish For Mosquito Control

Salisbury, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—The regular oiling of ponds in and near this city in the campaign for mosquito control has been augmented by the stocking of the ponds with thousands of fish which feed on the mosquito larvae.

The stocking of ponds is an experiment, as it is not known whether the fish can winter this far North. The fish were furnished by the Illinois State Department of Health.

Coal Dealers Protest Code Price Violations

Westminster, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Alleging that Pennsylvania truckers are selling coal in Carroll County at prices lower than the minimum established by division code authority, approximately 22 county dealears met here last night to discuss the situation.

John F. Palmer, Baltimore, code division chairman, asserted that action probably will be taken soon to prevent underselling by truckers.

Goldsborough Urged to Seek Governorship

Senator Talks With G.O.P. Chiefs as Friends Ask Him to Switch.

Baltimore, July 11 (Spl.).—Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough is considering entering the race for nomination as Republican candidate for Governor of Maryland, according to reliable reports here today.

The Senator, who was Governor from 1912 to 1916, held a series of conferences with a dozen leading Republicans here today, and tomorrow and Friday will meet other leaders. The subject of their discussion, it is said, is the advisability of his entering the gubernatroial race.

One difficulty, however, confronting those who wish Senator Goldsborough to seek the gubernatorial nomination is that already there are two avowed candidates for the race—Harry W. Nice and H. Webster Smith. Neither has shown any inclination to retire and both express confidience of victory. Mr. Nice appears to have the edge in attracting organization support.

Race Already Confused.

So long as Mr. Nice remains in the race, it is contended, Senator Goldsborough's entry would only create further confusion and dissension within the party. If Mr. Nice can not be persuaded to step aside, along with Mr. Smith, Senator Goldsborough may decide to seek reelection on the Nice ticket.

During the last week the dissension which has existed among Democrats over their gubernatorial nomination in part was shifted to the Senatorial nomination, which is an inducement to Senator Goldsborough to try for another six-year term in Washington. At all events, he is expected to make his plans known by the end of the week.

According to close friends of the Senator, he has received hundreds of requests from Republican voters to join in the fight for the governorship.

Invade Eastern Shore.

The two principal contenders already in the race are pushing their campaigns on the Eastern Shore this week. Mr. Nice is in Worcester County, where he is meeting leaders in the lower peninsula at a series of political rallies in Snow Hill, Princess Anne, Pocomoke City and other towns.

Mr. Smith will leave tomorrow for the Eastern Shore. He will speak at Hurlock, Secretary, East New Market, Taylors Island and Cambridge tomorrow, and Friday will address a rally in the music hall at Easton. Other stops Friday include Trappe, Tilghmans Island, St. Michaels, Preston, Oxford and Grazonville.

Saturday he will visit Fredericksburg, Churchill, Centerville, Rock Hall, Betterton, Sudlersville, Denton and Chestertown. He will be accompanied by former United States Senator Joseph I. France, who is seeking the Republican Senatorial nomination, and George W. Henderson, former Mayor of Cumberland, who is running for attorney general on the Smith ticket.

Maryland Primary Is Set for Sept. 12

Defenders Day Also Slated for Observance Then.

Baltimore, July 11 (Spl.).—By agreement of Republican and Democratic leaders, September 12 has been selected as the date for the primary elections in Maryland.

September 12, Defenders Day, is a legal holiday. It commemorates the defense of Baltimore by the militia in the War of 1812, when the British were defeated at the battle of North Point the day before Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The agreement made it possible to avoid fixing the primary date on the second Monday in September, which is a Jewish religious holiday. Members of that religion had urged that the election be held on some day other than the holiday.

Anne Arundel Tax Returns Are High

Maryland County Reports 53 Per Cent In.

Annapolis, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County is faring well in the matter of tax collections during the depression. C. Albert Hodges, county treasurer, said today that receipts for the first six months of this year are 9 per cent above the corresponding period of 1933, while payment of delinquent taxes have been greater in the last two years.

For the six months ended June 30, Hodges said receipts were $440,-191.31, of 53 per cent of the 1934 levy of $874,824.48. For the same period in 1933 income was $524,-424.15, of 44 per cent of the higher levy of $1,180,971,02.

Delinquent taxes collected for the years prior to 1934, totaled $192,-671.05 in the last six months, as against $113,019.22 in 1933 and $137,-357.31 in 1932.

Danville Ponders Power Resources

Council Names Group to Study Best Way.

Danville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—The finance committee of the city council this evening appointed a finding commission of 32 citizens to make a report on the best means of increasing generative power sources.

With the appointment an appropriation of $2,000 was made to secure an opinion on Danville's power problem by a firm of engineers.

The crucial point is whether the municipal power plant should be rebuilt in Danville or if a $3,000,000 hydroelectric station should be developed in Patrick County, 70 miles away.

Cigar Workers Strike; Nearby Plants Closed

4,000 Out in Maryland and Pennsylvania in Code Dispute.

West Minster, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Cigar factories throughout York and Adams Counties in Pennsylvania and the factory of H. N. Hustner & Son at Manchester, Carroll County, were closed today as the result of a general walkout of approximately 4,000 cigarmakers.

Employes allege that manufacturers have violated the code and signs were placed on various factories today announcing that the plants would be closed indefinitely until some agreement has been reached between the manufacturers and workers.

Reemployment Issue.

Accompanied by about 400 cigarmakers, a reputed union organizer visited factories at Red Lion, McSherrystown, Hanover, Littlestown, York, Dallastown and Windsor in Pennsylvania today and was scheduled to stop at Manchester. It was announced late today that the organizer would not hold a meeting at Manchester, although the factory there, which was not operating today, would be closed indefinitely tomorrow.

All the nonunion factories were affected by the voluntary closing, it was stated, although several small factories at Manchester will continue operations as usual.

The differences between employers and workers was felt in Carroll County, when employes staged a walkout yesterday. The walkout was said to be in the nature of a "sympathetic strike" to force the reemployment of some 20 persons dismissed by factory officials Friday.

No Disorder Reported.

No disorder was reported either yesterday or today, although State police and county officers were summoned to Manchester both days to prevent any possible trouble.

Action of the manufacturers in dismissing the employes at Manchester was said to have resulted from a check-up which revealed certain workers had not been performing the required amount of work.

Bank in Baltimore Gets U. S. Backing

RFC to Dictate Terms for Its Reopening.

Baltimore, July 11 (Spl.).—Announcement was made today that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will approve a loan of $1,235,-012 to the receiver of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. to enable the firm to resume its title operations and other activities. The loan is contingent, however, upon the adoption of a plan of operation satisfactory to the RFC.

The plan of reorganization is to be submitted to Bank Commissioner John J. Ghingher within a week. Mr. Ghingher is also receiver for the bank. It is said the reorganization plan will call upon the stockholders for payment of their double liability under the law. A distribution of about 30 per cent to depositors and creditors is expected.

Larceny Charge Dropped.

Westminster, Md., July 11 (Spl.). A charge of larceny of $350, preferred by Edward E. Mann, Finksburg, against his wife and stepdaughter, Mrs. Ora Mann and Miss Geneva Biehl, was dismissed yesterday by order of State's Attorney Theodore F. Brown.

Kin of Madison And Bishop Will Dedicate Bridge

Fredericksburg, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Dedication exercises to open the James Madison Memorial Bridge, spanning the Rappahannock River south of here between Port Royal and Port Conway, will include the Right Rev. Robert C. Jett, Bishop of southwest Virginia, and four descendants of James Madison, at whose birthplace the bridge is located.

The Madison descendants are Carol Blanton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Blanton; Mary Hooker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Preston Hooker; James Madison Cutts and Henrietta Anne Cutts.

Previously announced plans for the services included participation by Gov. Peery, Senator Byrd and other officials.

Opening of the highway system by means of the new bridge will make possible the marking of President Madison's birthplace with funds recently voted by Congress for the purpose. The appropriation provided that only birthplaces easily accessible to tourists could be marked with the Federal funds.

Murder Is Laid To Three More

Woman, Two Other Men, Accused in Slaying at Leesburg.

Leesburg, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Two more men and a woman were formally charged with murder today after Mrs. Nellie D. Cooper confessed helping conceal the body of Basil Brown, 44, war veteran, and named her husband and Cleveland Harper as co-slayers of Brown. A third man, Clarence Barnhouse, had been previously charged with murder.

Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher said Mrs. Cooper said that an argument arose as the men were drinking at the Cooper home July 1. She was quoted by Galleher as saying the trio of male defendants beat Brown until he fell from the porch. Thinking him dead they enlisted the woman's help and carried him to some underbrush 50 feet distant.

Some hours later Brown revived and his shouts drew the defendants to the scene again. This time, the woman told Galleher, the men made sure of Brown's death by striking him six or seven times more. The body was then buried in a ravine nearby, where authorities found it.

Arrested earlier, Barnhouse told authorities he killed brown in self-defense after the veteran beat and choked him.

Galleher said he would seek a special grand jury to hear the case so it may go on the docket at the present term of court.

County's Books Closed to State

Treasurers Only Are Held Liable to Audit.

Richmond, July 11 (AP).—The cash assets of county officers, other than treasurers, were declared immune from investigation by the State auditor's office in an opinion of the attorney general's office today. The ruling, written and made public by Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, was in reply to a request from L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor.

The opinion holds that the State may show officers, other than treasurers, accountable for a certain sum of money, but may not, at the same time, investigate to see if the officer has enough cash to meet the obligation when the date of settlement arrives.

Ritchie Off for Europe Tour; Cheering Crowd Bids Good-by

Baltimore, July 11 (Spl.).—As thousands cheered, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie late today boarded the Baltimore Mail Line steamer City of Norfolk for a six weeks' vacation trip to Europe. He was accompanied by Col. Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the State Board of Welfare.

Prior to his departure, Gov. Ritchie was guest of honor at a farewell party.

Several thousand loyal Democrats, as well as nearly all of the leading political figures of the city and many from the counties, were at the hotel to bid him bon voyage. Bands played, there was beer and crabs aplenty and speeches were cut short.

Among those who spoke were National Committeeman Howard Bruce, State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Connor, M. Harry Laib, chairman of the Democratic State central committee for Baltimore City, and Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, the Governor's chief rival for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Political rivalries apparently were forgotten in the excitement of the farewell party, for the Mayor bade the Governor Godspeed and told him the people of Baltimore wished him well.

The Governor spoke briefly, pointing out that his State ticket is nearly filled. It was considered significant, however, that he did not mention the name of George L. Radcliffe, Democratic candidate for the Senatorial nomination, as being on the Ritchie ticket. Other candidates on the Ritchie ticket were praised by the Governor.

Norfolk Board Urges Ouster Of FERA Man

County Supervisors Say Engineers Failed to Consult With Them.

Portsmouth, Va., July 11 (Spl.). Members of the Norfolk County board of supervisors voted three-to-two yesterday to request State officials of the FERA to have R. L. Baker, county projects engineer, removed.

While there was criticism as to Mr. Baker's work as an engineer, several members of the board stated that he went forward with work in their districts without consulting them about the work proposed. They felt, they said, that he should have discussed matters with them more freely.

In the differences between the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the county over the operation of the FERA office, Col. M. A. Butler, district project engineer, and H. H. Ransom, district supervisor, acted as intermediaries for the State. Supervisors voting for a change in engineers were Pearson, Smith and Wood, with Coleman and Hall dissenting. Illness kept Booker D. Wood from the meeting.

Mrs. Raleigh W. Harding, chairman of the Norfolk County Tuberculosis Association, presented a plan for six portable cottages for use of tuberculosis patients. Dr. Joshia Leakue, Norfolk County health officer, indorsing the plan, suggested that the work might be done as a FERA project.

Cities to Stabilize Navy Yards Work

Leaders Want to Retain Warships in Atlantic.

Norfolk, July 11 (Spl.).—Atlantic Seaboard cities will unite in a plan to stabilize work in navy yards, if plans discussed at a conference of representative citizens here today are adopted.

The conference was called by Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., of the Second Virginia District.

Retention of the Scouting Force on the East Coast was discussed, but it was decided that movement of Navy ships should be left in hands of the President and Secretary of the Navy.

The opinion prevailed, however, that wherever possible a part of the United States fleet should be on the East Coast.

Byron Gets Roads Post in Maryland

Washington County Man Succeeds E. B. Lee.

Hagerstown, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—Gov. Ritchie today informed State Senator William D. Byron, of Washington County, that he had appointed him a member of the State roads commission, succeeding E. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery County, who recently resigned.

Mr. Byron, 39, is vice president of W. D. Byron & Sons, Inc., operating a large tannery at Williamsport, and is connected with several manufacturing concerns here. He is vice president of the Herald Mail Co., which publishes both daily newspapers here, and is president of the Washington County National Bank of Williamsport.

His appointment will mean that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself in the State Senate.

Virginia Terrier Leads Dog's Life; Hounded by Court

Danville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Uncertain about the reliability of local dog experts and called on to settle the ownership of Snowball, white Scotch terrier, Magistrate Charles K. Carter brought his hunting dog with him to court today.

He knew its age and he put the experts to a test. Most of them were wrong.

He then ruled that Snowball belonged to the white claimant, C. A. Daniel, of Lynchburg, and he convicted Ella Davis, colored, of stealing it and gave her 30 days in jail.

The defendant appealed, however, and it then became necessary to bail the dog in the sum of $25 to appear before Judge Henry Leigh here in September. The issue was whether the dog was 6 years old as claimed by the defendant or 3 years old as claimed by Daniel.

Presbyterians Join Campaign To Clean Films

Norfolk District Pastors to Preach Sermons for Support.

Norfolk, Va., July 11.—Presbyterian churches of Norfolk Presbytery, which includes the Tidewater area, will support the campaign for better moving pictures as a result of action of ministers and laymen yesterday at Virginia Beach.

Sermons will be delivered by the pastors. The presbytery elected the Rev. Frank H. Scattergood as moderator.

The Rev. J. M. McKnight, pastor of Armstrong Memorial Presbyterian Church, brought up the moving picture campaign. He advocated signing the pledge of the Legion of Decency and said that it had been done at his church last Sunday.

The resolution indorsing the drive follows:

"Resolved, That the Norfolk Presbytery, in session at Virginia Beach, join in the crusade of the churches, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish, against indecent movies; that each minister in the Presbytery be urged to preach upon the subject and to present the Legion of Decency pledge to individual members to sign, in which they pledge themselves to remain away from all moving pictures, except those that do not offend decency and Christian morality."

Cumberland Man On Route 40 Board

Association Will Advocate National Highway.

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Walter A. Johnston, of Cumberland, is a director of Route 40 Publicity Association, Inc., just granted a charter in Uniontown, Pa., to boost the National highway by bringing to the attention of tourists the advantage of traveling over this route from Washington to St. Louis.

Luther A. Davis, Richmond, will be geenral manager of the new corporation, operating under the non-profit corporation laws. The movement has been indorsed by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

Officers are to be established in various cities. M. V. Glotfelty is local agent between Cumberland, Washington and Baltimore. The district from Cumberland to Washington, Pa., will be in charge of T. E. Junk.

Highway Advocates Seek Bristol Aid

Wise County Speeds Work on U. S. Route No. 23.

Bristol, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Cooperation of Bristol interests is being sought by Wise County, Va., business men in their efforts to speed improvement of United States route 23, the "Great Lakes to Ocean Highway."

Plans for further development of Wise County's portion of the highway were given impetus at various meetings recently. The Kiwanis Club of Norton and booster's organizations of young business men in Applachia and Big Stone Gap are pledged to renew a drive for funds.

The highway, entering Wise County from Kentucky near Pound, passes through Norton, Appalachia, Big Stone Gap and thence into Scott County, touching at Gate City.

50 at Waynesboro Masonic School

Annual Event Opens in Fairfax Hall.

Waynesboro, Va., July 11 (Spl.). The Valley Royal Arch School for Masons opened at Fairfax Hall here today with 50 prominent lodgemen from several States in attendance. Others are expected tomorrow morning.

The school, an annual event here for several years, will continue a week.

Among the officials to address the school are Ollie Hope, grand high priest, Richmond; John T. Cochran, grand lecturer, The Plains; the Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs, grand chaplain, Staunton; W. Frank Bowden, Norfolk; James M. Clist, Richmond; S. Tate Sterrett, Staunton; P. M. Shirley, Front Royal; W. H. Whitesell, Richmond, and W. A. James, Beckley, W. Va.

D. C. Guardsmen Meet the 'Enemy' Near Front Royal

Front Royal, July 11 (Spl.).—A detail of the 260th Coast Artillery, District of Columbia National Guard, encamped at Elizabeth Furnace in Powell's Fort Valley, about 10 miles from here, moved out yesterday and laid telephone wires into Front Royal, and installed telephones to provide facilities of communication for the protection of an imaginary Seventy-eighth Division moving southward through the town.

Last night three huge searchlights played their beams in the sky over Front Royal, from their base near Waterlick, 8 miles west of here, in search of "enemy" planes, against a possible attack on the division encamped here.

Following the defense of Front Royal yesterday, the outfit stood annual official inspection today by officers of the War Department, and a formal parade at 7 p. m. Tomorrow at 7 a. m. the guardsmen will break camp and move to Charleston, W. Va., across the Allegheny Mountains.

The unit consists of 25 officers and 260 men, and carries a motor fleet of 32 trucks. Last Saturday and Sunday it was encamped at Shenandoah Caverns, near Mount Jackson. At each camp it engages in land and air maneuvers.

Prison-Made Shirts Hamper NRA Factories

60 Maryland Operators Complain to Code Authorities.

Salisbury, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—The cotton garment industry can not maintain NRA code wages and at the same time meet the competition of prison-made products, State Compliance Authorities were told last night, when more than 60 plant operators met here to discuss code violations.

It was asserted that retail outlets have become saturated with prison-made shirts to the extent that some commercial plants have been forced out of business and others severely crippled.

Prison labor is paid 75 cents per dozen for shirts, it was said, while plants under the NRA code must pay a minimum of $2.25 per dozen. Labor and material, say the operators, cost $5.38 per dozen, while prison-made shirts of the same material are being sold to retailers at $4.50 per dozen.

What to do with employes who have been in the same plant for many years and now, because of age, can no longer produce anywhere near the minimum wage, was one of the questions put up to the code authorities.

To the suggestion that two classifications for minimum wage be established. Joseph M. Atkinson, head of the Cotton Garment Code Authority for Maryland, said that such a plan was now under consideration.

It was urged upon the Eastern Shore contractors and manufacturers to organize an association where the exchange of ideas and plans would be mutually helpful and through which their problems could be presented to the code authorities.

It was insisted that contractors and manufacturers alike must comply with the letter and spirit of the code affecting their industry.

Another meeting will be held here Monday to form an organization of cotton garment manufacturers.

Virginia Seventh In Tax Payments To Government

Richmond, July 11 (Spl.).—Six States paid more Federal revenue taxes in the 1934 fiscal year than Virginia, a study of statistics released by the Treasury Department reveals. The Old Dominion, before the beginning of the depression, was tenth or eleventh annually.

Payments for the year were $122,-619,973, as compared with $103,798,-963 in the previous year.

Income tax payments were $6,-255,147 by corporations and $2,583,-500 by individuals.

Miscellaneous items accounted for $107,819,813.

Two Killed as Truck Crashes Phone Pole

Fredericksburg, Va., July 11 (Spl.). Two men were killed this morning when their truck overturned after crashing into a telephone pole at Woodlawn, 30 miles north of here.

The dead are Lloyd C. Jenkins, 22, and J. H. Jenkins, 23. The youths were returning to their homes at Bena, Va., after delivering a load of produce in Baltimore.

Rites Set Tomorrow for Teacher With 56-Year Attendance Mark

Harrisonburg, Va., July 11 (Spl.). Lucy F. Sims, for 56 years a teacher in the Harrisonburg colored schools, will be buried in Newtown Cemetery Friday.

She was found dead yesterday at her home after an attack. Apparently she had gone to the porch to summon aid and collapsed.

The record of the colored teacher is believed unparalleled in Virginia educational circles. She taught three generations of many families, and it is estimated that at least 1,800 boys and girls were instructed by her. She was preparing to start on her fifty-seventh session when stricken.

William H. Keister, city superintendent of schools, last night paid a glowing tribute to her service and suggested that the colored playground being constructed should be named in her honor. He said that she did not miss a single hour because of illness during her long years of service until last winter. She was teaching here when Keister took charge of the Harrisonburg schools 40 years ago.

Five Men Held In Death Drop Of Gatekeeper

Charged With Negligence in 90-Foot Fall of Bridge Hand.

Norfolk, July 11 (Spl.).—While funeral services were being held at Coinjock, N. C., today for David Lindsey, 64, gatekeeper on the Coinjock Bridge, killed Monday night when the draw rose suddenly, hurling him to the concrete 90 feet below, five men, all out on bail, were awaiting a hearing on charges of criminal negligence.

The hearing is to be held Monday, July 23, before Justice J. A. Summerall of the Recorder' Court of Currituck County.

The five are: James E. Cross, Otto J. Gundich and Percy L. Hitchings, of Ocean View; Fred Conway, colored, of Norfolk, and J. T. Nelson, of Newport News. They were all members of a crew, employed by the Norfolk Machine Co., and engaged in repairing the bridge.

The workmen were arrested, according to E. R. Woodward, Currituck County prosecuting attorney, because information had been received that in the process of their repair work on their draw they had lossened two important bolts and cut two others with a blow torch. This, it is alleged, allowed the drawbridge gears to come out of mesh, and fling the draw upward with Lindsey upon it.

According to witnesses, Lindsey was standing on the edge of the draw, when, without warning, it rose suddenly to its full height of 90 feet. He held on for a few minutes, but his hold weakened and he dropped to the concrete abutment below.

Leaders of Baptist Church Will Meet

Albemarle Association to to Convene July 17.

Charlottesville, Va., July 11.—Prominent Baptist leaders of Virginia will take part in the program of the 144th annual meeting of the Albemarle Baptist Association at the Fork Union Baptist Church July 17 and 18.

Twenty-five churches compose the association, one of the largest in the State. They are Albemarle, Antioch, Bethany, Bethel, Chestnut Grove, Covesville, Crozet, Effort, First Church (Charlottesville), Fluvanna, Fork Union, Free Union, Hardware, Hillsboro, Ivy, Laurel Hill, Liberty, Mooreland, Mount Ed, Mount Eagle, Mountain Plain, Preddys Creek, Scottsville, Slate Hill and the University Baptist Church.

Dr. George T. Waite, Baptist State Mission secretary, and Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Richmond, are two of the speakers who will take part in this two-day session.

Mrs. Blanche Williams Buried in Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg Va., July 11 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Blanche Roache Williams, wife of Harold Williams, foreman on the Chesapeake Western Railway.

Mrs. Williams was stricken suddenly in her home. The Rev. John F. Locke conducted the ceremonies. Besides her husband, she is survived by three children, two sisters and a brother.

Peery Vetoes Salary Raises Of State Help

Governor Says Business Conditions Do Not Warrant Increase.

Richmond, July 11 (Spl.).—In a letter to State department heads today Gov. Peery imposed a blanket veto upon departmental requests for salary increases beyond those provided in the 1934 appropriation act.

The Governor held that business conditions and the State finances have not improved materially since the 1934 Assembly.

His letter said: "In view of certain requests which have been received for approval of salary increases, it is considered advisable to call attention to the policy which it is believed should govern such matters at this time.

"The departments were informed by Gov. Pollard in August, 1930, that it would be necessary to discontinue salary increases in consequence of the depression. The General Assembly later ordered a 10 per cent salary reduction, which subsequently increased to 20 per cent on salaries in excess of $1,500 and 15 per cent on smaller salaries.

"At the recent session of the General Assembly the salary reductions heretofore made were so modified as to provide for a flat reduction of only 10 per cent in all base salaries, effective as of July 1, 1934. Efforts were made to obtain from the General Assembly additional salaries for many officials and employes, but these proposed increases were disallowed almost without exception. It was clearly the sentiment of the General Assembly that the partial restoration of salary cuts provided in the appropriation bill represented as liberal a policy with respect to salaries as was possible at this time.

"Since the adjournment of the General Assembly no material improvement in business conditions or in State finances has occurred. The deficit in the general fund of the treasury, on the contrary, is somewhat larger than was indicated when the appropriation bill was under consideration.

"In passing on requests for salary increases the Governor must necessarily be governed in a large measure by the policy which the General Assembly has indicated should be followed with reference to such matters. In view of the refusal of the General Assembly at its recent session to authorize such increases, I do not feel that I would be warranted in departing from this policy in the absence of a much greater improvement in business conditions than has yet occurred and a more satisfactory outlook for the State treasury."

Brother Takes Dr. Gish Home

Victim of Mystery Boat Shooting Refuses to Explain Case.

Norfolk, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Dr. Earl H. Gish, 38, Philadelphia dentist, left Norfolk today for Harrisburg, Pa., in the care of his brother, R. H. Gish, a Harrisburg banker, leaving unsolved the mystery surrounding a bullet wound in the side received by the dentist a moment before he plunged overboard from a New York steamer as the vessel was docking at Norfolk July 1.

R. H. Gish arrived here yesterday from Harrisburg. He held a brief conversation with his brother in the jail hospital today. After the interview, Mr. Gish said that his brother suffered a nervous breakdown while in his senior year at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was graduated with a degree of dental surgery and a degree of bachelor of science.

The Harrisburg man said he was completely in the dark as to any motive his brother might have had for shooting himself.

Dr. Gish, who disappeared from Philadelphia May 24, refused to discuss the shooting. All that could be learned from him was that he was shot "by a friend" and it was "purely a personal matter."

Two Most Popular Students Are Wed

Miss Katherine Watring Is Now Mrs. Harry Shelton.

Elkins, W. Va., July 11 (Spl.). The boy and the girl who were elected for two years as the most popular students at Davis and Elkins College are now husband and wife.

Miss Katherine Watring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Watring, of Elkins, and Harry Shelton, also of this city, were married on June 10 at Oakland, Md., it was announced today. The bride is a junior. The bridegroom received a science degree last month. They will reside at Piedmont, where Shelton has accepted appointment as foot ball and basket ball coach.

Daily Brothers' Rites Set Today

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (Spl.). The death of Harry C. Daily, 56, Baltimore & Ohio shop employe, at Memorial Hospital Monday, was followed so closely by that of his brother, William O. Daily, 59, at State Sanitarium, Sabillasville, yesterday, that the funeral service for the former, set for this afternoon, was postponed until tomorrow afternoon, so that a double burial service might be held. Interment will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

They were sons of LaFayette and Sarah Strawbridge Daily and brothers of Ora Daily, Mrs. Minnie Robinson, Mrs. Edith Dennison, Mrs. Vera Middleton and Mrs. Maggie Reckley, of Frostburg, and Sadie and Wonnie Daily, at home.

Ickes Defends Code Increase In Gas Prices

Secretary Says Thousands of Stations Kept in Existence.

Secretary Ickes yesterday defended the increase in gasoline prices brought about by the oil code in a review of the Oil Administration's first year.

Citing that the Federal Trade Commission has reported the increase in gasoline prices amounts to $160,000,000 a year, Secretary Ickes, who is oil administrator, said:

"We have been criticized, and we feel unfairly so, because of this increase. The fundamental purpose of the National industrial recovery act was the restoration of purchasing power by increasing wages and employment, of necessity providing that business should earn sufficient to meet these increased costs."

Simultaneously, the Oil Administration announced that gasoline production for August would be reduced by 930,000 barrels, as compared with July, which would allow a National production limit of 36,270,000 barrels. Gasoline inventories, according to the statement, must be cut by 4,270,000 barrels during the month.

Mr. Ickes declared that "a steady march toward economic stability for the oil industry and the true conservation of America's petroleum riches" is noticeable in the first year of the Oil Administration's history.

He revealed that a renewed effort would be made in the next Congress to obtain passage of the Disney-Thomas oil control bill, which failed in the seventy-third session.

Among the benefits of the code which he cited were a tripling of the price of crude oil; curbing of the flow of "hot" oil; employment of an additional 100,000 persons, and increase in the industry's pay roll of $150,000,000.

While the average increase in the price of gasoline has been from a half-cent to a cent a gallon, Ickes said, "the prices are still well below 1926 levels."

"Gasoline prices were ruinously low when the code went into effect," he said, "and literally tens of thousands of gasoline stations faced immediate extinction. These stations have been kept open by the effects of the code."

Mrs. Small Is Buried From Home of Father

Winchester, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Eleanor Chiles Small, wife of Dr. George William Small, of the University of Maine, Bangor, who died Sunday, were held yesterday at Plainfield, the home of her father, Samuel M. Chiles, at Kernstown.

The services were conducted by the Rev. T. H. Daffin, of Gerrardstown, W. Va., and the Rev. Guy M. Morrow, of Lucketts. Burial was postponed until today to await relatives from Jacksonville, Fla.

Mrs. Stone, 95, Dies At Westminster, Md.

Westminster, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—Mrs. Mary Catherine Stone, 95, Manchester's oldest resident, died today at her home.

Mrs. Stone was the widow of William P. Stone. She is survived by a niece, Mrs. Emory Berwager, with whom she made her home. Funeral services will be held Friday.

Prince Georges Candidates

Two leading Democrats of Prince Georges County, Walter L. Green, left, and Robert W. McCullough, are among the first candidates to "climb on the band wagon" as the county mobilizes for the September primaries. McCullough has filed for State's attorney. Green will file for the House of Delegates.

Will of Former Priest Attacked; Left All to Wife

Norfolk, Va., July 11 (AP).—The will of a former priest who married the woman who had nursed him through a severe sickness is being attacked in Circuit Court of Princess Anne County.

The priest was Father William R. Hayes, for 30 years priest of Newburgh parish, Orange County, N. Y., who died April 27 in Murray Hill Sanitarium, and whose will, probated in the office of the clerk of the court of Princess Anne County, leaves all save $2 of his $51,000 estate to his widow, Mrs. Adelaide M. Hayes.

The contestants are Mrs. Mary A. Guilfeil, a sister, and Paul H. Guilfeil, a nephew, who under the terms of the will, dated July 15, 1932, two months prior to his marriage, were bequeathed $1 each.

Hayes, who had been inactive for several years previous to his death on account of ill health, was married to Miss Adelaide Grady, of New York, at Elizabeth City, N. C., on September 12, 1932. The ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace.

This will, the contestants claim, is null and void, by reason of the fact that Hayes is described as having been mentally incapable of making a will or entering into a valid marriage contract.

The case is to be heard before Judge B. D. White, of Princess Anne Circuit Court, July 19.

Saville Opposes Arnold In Hampshire County

Romney, W. Va., July 11 (Spl.).—George S. Arnold, Democrat, member of the House of Delegates from Hampshire County, is opposed for renomination by J. Burr Saville, Democrat, it was shown yesterday with completion of the filings. John S. Lehman, city recorder, Republican, is unopposed. Other filings include:

Clark, of the Circuit Court: Edgar O. Shanholtzer, now holding office; E. W. Noland, R. J. Ruckman, James Short, Nelson Day, A. G. Abell and Asa B. Combs, all Democrats.

Board of Education—Ira V. Cowgill, J. Holland Rannells, J. Russell Fugh, George W. Stewart, Henry Campbell, Democrats, all five now holding office.

Woodcock Studies Judgeship Contest

College Head to Consider St. John's Welfare.

Annapolis, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, of Salisbury, who is considering becoming Republican candidate for the chief judgeship of the Fifth Judicial Circuit of Maryland, said today that the welfare of St. John's College, of Annapolis, of which he was elected president several months ago, would weigh heavily in making his final decision.

The former Federal prohibition administrator said the judgeship has been his long cherished ambition. His first plans to enter such a contest were interfered with by the war, and then other developments.

"I think when a man is offered the opportunity to run for public office he should give it serious consideration," Woodstock said, "but I want it understood that my first and major thought will be what is best for St. John's."

Virginia Protests Water-Rail Rates

Claims New England Would Get Advantage.

Richmond, July 11 (Spl.).—Water-rail freight rates to the Middle West through Virginia ports, proposed in the report of G. L. Shinn, examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission, are unlawful under the fourth section of the interstate commerce act, the State Corporation Commission contends in a brief of exceptions to the Shinn report sent to the I. C. C. today.

The brief, prepared by H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel of the commission, and H. J. Wagner, director, and H. V. C. Wade, assistant director of the Norfolk Port Traffic Commission, holds that Shinn "does not grasp the seriousness of this proceeding to the Virginia interests."

Under the proposals, rates on shipments via ocean and rail from Northern and New England ports would be lower to Middle Western points than rates from Virginia cities to the Middle West.

Legion Will Check Jobs for Veterans

Westminster Post to See Law Is Enforced.

Westminster, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Headed by Capt. John Magin as chairman, a committee was named last night by Carroll Post, No. 31, American Legion, to see that the law is enforced in placing veterans in jobs available on the sewerage system and disposal plant project here.

The action was said to have resulted from difficulties encountered by veterans in getting CWA jobs last winter.

A motion by the citizens' committee to erect a war memorial here has been ratified by the executive committee. Members of the citizens committee include John L. Reifsnider, Walter Davis, Frank Schaeffer and Dr. Henry M. Fitzhugh.

Danville Street Work Nearing Completion

Danville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Completion of Danville's street improvement program this week will release relief labor for work on the city airport, where approximately $1,500 is to be spent in grading and developing a third runway.

The Danville Young Men's Club, promoting the airport, has received a letter from Senator Byrd saying that $40,000 Federal funds and $20,000 in a State appropriation is available for the improvement of Virginia's 27 airports.

Hopewell Robbers Steal Safe.

Hopewell, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Thieves entered the James Billiard Parlors yesterday and removed a 300-pound safe said to contain $200. Automobile tracks in the rear indicate that the safe was carried off in a car.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie and Hee-Haw Make Plans

STORY 112 Thursday, July 12.
BLACKIE BEAR

When Blackie woke up the next morning, his plans for going back to the creek looked just as good to him as they did the night before. The truth is that they looked even a little better, for when he went out to Hee-Haw's lot, and found him nibbling around to get his breakfast off of the short brown grass, he was sure that Hee-Haw would get along lots better on Mr. Man's corn and oats.

He told Hee-Haw what he had been thinking about letting him go back down the country and staying with Mr. Man for a while, where he could get a lot of good things to eat, and where it would be warmer in the winter than it would be in the mountains. He explained to Hee-Haw what Chatter Squirrel had heard Mr. Man say about being good to him if he came back, and how, now that the crops were all finished, he wouldn't have much to do but haul up some wood and go to town once in a while.

It didn't take Hee-Haw long to decide about going back on a visit, for he could just see all that nice new hay and oats and corn that Mr. Man had. It was pretty nice in the mountains in the summer time, when there was plenty of green grass, but it really would be better at Mr. Man's in the winter.

"But you want to behave yourself mighty well," said Blackie, "so Mr. Man will just turn you loose any time without tying you. You want it so that you can come to me any time I send Jay Bird for you.

"Besides, you ought to do what he wants you to as long as he feeds you and is good to you. Jay Bird will go over to see you every now and then, and if Mr. Man doesn't treat you well just tell Jay Bird, and you can come back to me. All I want you to do is to keep quiet at night if you should happen to hear anything that sounds like Creek Folks around the place."

When Blackie told the folks about his plans that night while they were sitting around the fire eating chestnuts, everybody was surprised. They thought they were all settled down for the winter, with plenty of wood and things to eat.

Blackie told them that they would all go back except Grandpa Bear, who would have to stay to look after the lambs and bees and chickens. Besides, the house was better than Blackie's, and Grandpa might have rheumatism or something if he didn't have a good house and bed.

Grandma and Bettie and the children all thought the same thing. After having all these men around the house, they couldn't think of letting every last one of them leave.

So it was decided that they would all get ready tomorrow, but even after it was decided, Grandma and Bettie had to talk a whole lot about what a hard time they were going to have "with nobody but Grandpa and the children to do all the things around the place."

So they all talked on and on about it, until Blackie knocked the ashes out of his pipe, stretching his legs, and said that his pillow was just hollering for him to come and lie on it.

So This Is Washington.

Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, of the House District Committee, has entered a vigorous protest against the proposal to erect a gasoline service station on Constitution avenue at Second street. Her complaint is one which deserves, and will doubtless receive, widespread public indorsement.

The site in question is not large enough for a monumental structure of either a public or private character. Taxes on it are high. It appears that the owners and the oil company leasing it secured a permit to build a service station chiefly on the argument that high taxes make it necessary to derive some revenue from this property. At any rate, the permit has been granted by the District Commissioners, with the approval of the Zoning Commission, and a design for a gasoline-vending establishment has been approved by the Fine Arts Commission.

Even though the design of this temporary building is said to be less obnoxious than the ordinary service station, it is astonishing that such an encroachment upon the dignity of the Capitol and its surrounding structures should be permitted at this time. The Government is spending millions of dollars to make Constitution avenue one of the finest streets in the world. Yet to ease the burden on one taxpayer the atmosphere of this project is desecrated by a commercial establishment of an essentially inartistic nature.

The precedent thus set is even more disconcerting than the act itself. Will every property owner adjacent to public buildings be allowed to erect service stations or hot dog stands as a revenue-producing proposition? Obviously Representative Jenckes is justified in demanding an investigation. If there is not sufficient authority in the half-dozen agencies charged with planning and developing the National Capital to avert blunders of this sort, then our zoning regulations would seem to be in need of drastic revision.

Russia Moves Forward.

Abolition of the Russian secret police organization—the notorious Ogpu—has been effected by decree, and a new Commissariat of the Interior has taken over the task of investigating the activities of those suspected of plots against the state. Any evidence obtained will be turned over to the regular courts and military tribunals "in accordance with the established law."

An agency like the Ogpu, which investigates, arrests, and summarily tries the accused, is something more than a tyrannical instrumentality. It is also an indication of political weakness. The mere existence of such an agency testifies to a lack of confidence in the solidity of the institutions it is established to protect. Consequently the decision of the Soviet government to rely upon the regular courts to deal with treason is proof of the confidence now felt in the permanency of the new revolutionary order. It is a confidence, moreover, which the rulers of Czarist Russia never felt.

The significance of this action is emphasized by the reversion of Germany to the terroristic methods that Russia has decided to abandon. Raids, arrests and executions without trial are methods suited to a tottering dictatorship as well as to a new-born revolutionary regime. A feeble government, or a Government which seeks to grasp powers that do not belong to it, can not rely upon the regularly constituted courts of the land to destroy its enemies. Hence the startling spectacle is presented of Germany turning to the methods which Russia is leaving behind her as cast-off machinery, superfluous to a peaceful and stable form of government.

A Matter Of Decency.

Although the establishment of a new cafeteria for relief of transients is not a direct result of recent food-poisoning episodes, it is to be hoped that it will eliminate misfortunes of that kind. On three different occasions, penniless men fed by the Transient Relief Bureau have been stricken with stomachic disorders. Presumably these painful experiences have been a direct result of carelessness in the preparation of food.

It is not necessary to spend large sums to make certain that meals served to destitute individuals are clean and wholesome. These are largely matters of care in the preparation and selection of food. Recent events in the Bureau of Transient Relief suggest that vigilance to determine that relief funds are carefully spent is no less important than precautions against excessive expenditure.

An attitude of carelessness is too frequently found in agencies caring for destitute people. Particularly is that true in the case of transients. Obviously it should not be tolerated. Common decency and common sense demand that all assistance to the helpless be maintained on a basis which will improve and not deteriorate their morale.

The French Maneuvers.

Among the vista of possibilities opened by recent events in Germany, an advance toward political stabilization in Europe is fortunately not one of the least probable. That France is very anxious to capitalize the present uneasy situation in behalf of "security"—the cardinal point of her foreign policy since 1919—is apparent from the recent widespread activities of Foreign Minister Barthou. And circumstances are giving his efforts a broader general support than has been available to France for a long time.

In the first place the French program of extensive regional agreements has the backing of Russia, whose reappearance as a principal actor on the stage of Weltpolitik demands a new appraisal of all post-war European alignments. A second point in M. Barthou's favor is that Italy has in a measure been left isolated by the revelations of deep internal dissensions in Germany. The collapse of Hitler's stock would in itself make any anti-French combination by the two dictators impossible even if there were no other reasons rendering such an orientation unlikely.

The necessity for Nazi leadership to accept severe retrenchment in its foreign policy and to concentrate on shoring up a tottering domestic structure needs no emphasis. And the opportunity which has been dumped in the lap of the Quai d'Orsay is further attested by the indications that British foreign policy will continue to be one of relative isolation. This exhibition of caution is a virtual invitation to France to take the reins of European leadership into her own hands. With a relatively clear field before them French foreign ministers have seldom needed urging to assume the role of diplomatic prima donna.

Much will depend on the manner in which France utilizes the opportunities which Fate and Hitler have offered her. The indications so far are that the course to be plotted in Paris will be an advance on that sponsored by Clemenceau and Poincare. That is to say, it will not be predicated on the permanent subordination or dismembership of Germany, perhaps because the French feel that the Reich today is too sick socially to be dangerous from a military viewpoint. Instead M. Barthou seems to seek to stretch a helping hand across the Rhine, where bitter disillusionment has gone far to replace the arrogance and bluster of the past.

The conciliatory attitude is further indicated by the emphasis which French political writers, generally inspired by their foreign office, are laying on the importance of bolstering Geneva, and of turning the present crisis to the aid of the Disarmament Conference. More and more, of late years, French foreign policy has centered on strengthening the League of Nations, of making it an agency on which a member state can really rely in an emergency. This far-sighted policy would summon international idealism to redress the European balance, which French realism knows is weighted against her in terms of man power and resources.

M. Barthou's suggestion of an extension of the Locarno principle by constituting two sweeping regional pacts, one for northern and one for southern Europe, both to be welded to the League Covenant, now appears as the practical application of French policy to the situation created by current events in Germany. And so far the plan is moving smoothly. It has tacit Russian indorsement; it has British sympathy; and it has as yet aroused no overt Italian hostility. Almost as much as revelation of Mussolini's attitude, the reaction in Germany will be vital to the outcome of the maneuver.

The Reich, however, is not today in a position where resentment can effectively be shown. France has the whip hand. If Hitler dissents, Barthou can readily intimate that the two security pacts may be made into a ring of steel binding a crushed and humbled people within abbreviated borders. But if Germany plays ball he can easily show that the plan is not an anti-German alliance. It is as truly describable as a collective peace system through which the Reich, restored to League membership and a revitalized disarmament conference, could perhaps find final freedom from the chains forged at Versailles.

Joy And Exuberance.

The gentle Gamaliel Bradford, living in his big house in Wellesley, or communing with his saints and sinners in the quiet halls of the Boston Athenaeum, where the green baize bag, is the symbol of cultured propriety, was far removed from the contemporary world. But, despite his enforced aloofness, his writings won him wide attention and his fame appears to be increasing year by year.

His "Journal," which he kept with assiduous regularity over many years, was a revealing document. A man who suffered physical pain much of his life, he had set for himself a well-regulated system which resulted in the production of many books. He was a wise man, a philosopher, and a wit. He might have seemed to be living in the past, his beloved Sainte-Beuve always close by. But in reality he was a vital human being.

Unlike so many moderns he wrote letters, almost indiscriminatingly, almost always as an extra means of self-expression. It was his way of conversing with the outside world. Many of these will be published shortly. One of them to another writer says: "You make such a joyous and exuberant business of words. What is there behind them? I, too, have trifled with words all my life, have teased them, bullied them, and above all things have enjoyed them, but as I get past fifty, I begin to suspect they have fooled me."

The joyous and exuberant business of words!

It is a delightful phrase. It so perfectly expresses what all writers ought to strive for. All writers, that is, who are worth their salt. Conrad also spoke of the "old, old words, grown thin through years of careless usage."

There has been much assertion lately that the words matter hardly at all; that it is the thought rather than its expression which counts. It is quite true that the joy and exuberance of words alone do not make great books, but, as the thin, pale little man of Wellesley knew so well, they are qualities that are greatly needed.

"Some day, damn it," he wrote, "I will do something that will be real and solid and violent and human, if I am over fifty."

Joy, exuberance, solidity, violence, and humanity—perhaps in this casual letter Gamaliel Bradford set forth a creed without intending to. At least he indicated five characteristics that are essential to the art, or even the profession, of writing.

Changes In The NRA.

Announcement of an impending reorganization of the NRA and the retirement of Gen. Johnson from his position of one-man control give added interest to current discussion of the future of this basic New Deal organism. In spite of occasional fiery clashes between the Recovery Administrator and representatives of business, Gen. Johnson has throughout been an upholder of the principle of industrial self-regulation. Under codes which he has approved, organized industries have secured rights of control over prices and production for which they fought in vain under the regime of the antitrust laws. Fear of a possible return to conditions of unregulated competition is heightened, therefore, by the knowledge that a different administrative agency will hereafter formulate policies.

The fact should be frankly faced that regulation of competition necessarily involves price control of some sort. The methods of control may be open or disguised, direct or indirect. But whatever the form, they operate to establish prices fixed by agreement in place of prices fixed by the uncontrolled action of market forces.

The waste and the lawlessness of absolutely free competition have been deplored by thoughtful students of business conditions for many years. Sales below cost, with intention to eliminate competitors and then raise prices; general price cutting, leading to serious injuries to entire industries; and discrimination of various kinds in dealing with customers are all socially destructive practices that should be curbed. Yet our antitrust laws have in the past made it illegal to attempt to control prices, however reasonable or necessary such action might be.

This insistence upon forced competition has not protected the consuming public against exploitation. On the contrary, the antitrust laws have directly encouraged the development of monopolistic combinations because independent concerns have been prevented from making reasonable agreements to control prices and regulate output.

Donald Richberg, counsel for the NRA, who is expected to play an important part in determining the character of NRA policies in the future, is a firm believer in industrial self-regulation. In an address this week he asserted that "if we write our rules of fair competition for the sole purpose of protecting the efficient enterprise, regardless of size, from unfair competition either in trade practices or in overworking and underpaving labor, then we must expect to see gradual elimination of many enterprises, too big or too small to survive in a fair field."

In other words, Mr. Richberg maintains, we think rightly, that the NRA was not established either to keep inefficient small concerns alive or to suppress efficient large ones. Its purpose is to regulate competition to the extent necessary to protect all efficient concerns, whether large or small, from the wastes and losses of an unregulated competitive regime.

Mistakes of policy have, of course, been made in organizing thousands of industries under an emergency law and in undertaking to carry out an over-ambitious program almost overnight. Modification of policy and limitation of the scope of activity are to be expected. But it might well be a public misfortune to scrap or seriously cripple the machinery of price and production control established under the NRA. Those who demand restoration of the antitrust laws in full force are asking for a return to wasteful and destructive practices, injurious to producers and consumers alike, detrimental to the efficient as well as to the inefficient.

Fort Stevens.

Washington is one of the few cities with a battlefield within its borders. Scores of capitals have suffered siege. Paris, Moscow, Madrid and many more have been the scene of revolt and revolution. But on a site embraced within the limits of modern Washington was fought, between two disciplined forces, the historic action of Fort Stevens.

Success of Jubal Early's attack, any tardiness in the arrival of Wright from Baltimore, would have meant the loss of the Capital to the Confederates, perhaps the recognition of the Confederacy as a sovereign state, possibly a far different history of the North American Continent. Yet this engagement, fought 70 years ago yesterday and today, is one of the actions of the Civil War where history has little to say.

Every tourist that comes to this city sees the Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, the White House, Arlington, Mount Vernon, the Capitol and other Governmental buildings—and goes away thinking he has seen all our historic sites. The average Washingtonian sees many of these landmarks almost daily—or, passing them, fails to see them—and believes that he knows his city. Is it well that all battlegrounds should be forgotten? If not, would it not be well if Fort Stevens were better remembered?

Latest tests place the average mental age of an American at 16 years. This represents the peak, as there's hardly anything that a 16-year-old doesn't know.

Congress has reduced the cost of becoming a citizen of the United States.—News item. Wish it would reduce the cost of remaining one.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Easier Said Than Done.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The foreign government payments can be effected by the delivery of goods for the use of the Government of the United States, which need not curtail the regular international commercial exchanges. This arrangement may thus be exemplified in principle: Let Russia, which is an ultimate debtor having no external credits, deliver petroleum for the use of the Navy and for other Government requirements and wood pulp to Belgium for fabrication into paper stock for the Government Printing Office and for all other Government paper supplies. Let Britain furnish cement for all highway construction, hydraulic works and other public projects executed or subsidized by Government appropriations, and all woolen, cotton and linen textiles used by the Army, the Navy and the Federal hospitals. Let Britain also build the ships requisite for our treaty Navy, to include submarines that will come up for air and cruisers that will not take on a case of rollics in the seaway. Let France furnish us paper francs to be sold for dollars to every American who takes out a passport to visit the continent. In short, let us have a complete specification of all the goods and materials to be purchased for the use of the Government and then let us requisition these goods from our foreign government debtors.

Wants More Food.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Old Dealers are back at their old job again. The country has to be saved again and, of course, it takes the high command of the G. O. P., lately known as the Old Dealers, to do it.

Mr. Borah told us in the campaign of 1928 that if a certain candidate was elected to the Presidency, the country would be ruined and that a calamity would follow. Well, that candidate was not elected, but Mr. Borah's candidate that he campaigned for was elected. And everything that the Senator said would happen transpired, and more, too. The Idaho Senator fought Mr. Hoover's leadership from the time he took the oath of office until his defeat in 1932.

If creating jobs for the millions of unemployed and the feeding of millions of starving people are unconstitutional, I believe I am voicing the sentiments of millions of my fellow countrymen when I say give us more jobs and give more food to the starving millions and scrap the Constitution.

Suggested Slogan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In commending your editorial, "Advice to a Chairman," I would like to suggest as a slogan for the G. O. P. in the coming campaign—"Stop, Look and Listen." There has never been a time when caution was more desirable than now.

Nobody questions that conditions are better than a year or 15 months ago, but have Government policies helped or hindered? What will be the future effects of these policies? The issue should be fully and fairly met. Stop playing politics; play facts. The right doesn't always prevail, but I believe the intelligence of the American people will assert itself in the end. J. G. A.

Enjoys Post Hikes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to tell you how much I appreciate and enjoy the hikes you are sponsoring. I have been on these hikes only two Sundays, but I do not know of anything I have enjoyed as much. I hope you will continue them for some time to come. ELSIE M. HECKMAN.

Invalids and Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Unfortunately I am an invalid and have been for the past two years. I was successful in keeping soul and body together until recently. As iron wears out, money gives out. Therefore, I was forced to seek relief. I wonder where are the State agencies which used to look after the invalids. Does the State care if we perish? If not, why can't the State take note and see to it that we get a little food and shelter?

During the month of June I was passed up. In some way or other I paid my rent with excuses and relief promises, looking forward to what July would bring forth. The month of July scattered no roses along my pathway. You can see what a predicament I am in, with nothing to eat, no clothes to wear, sick and nowhere to go.

To be unemployed is bad enough, but to be sick and afflicted is worse. It seems to me that the State leaves the invalids in the hands of the relief agencies and in turn the relief agencies classify the invalids as unemployed.

Will some of the readers of The Post please give me a thought that will help to clear up the matter? I am hoping that the State agencies, if not the relief workers, will please give the shut-in a little more consideration and make a distinction between the invalids and the unemployed. I do not say this to be murmuring or complaining nor to express my ingratitude. Be it far from me to murmur or complain. Just a little reminder. "Forget me not." AN INVALID.
Washington, July 10.

Retrospection.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1929 before the crash and when the Coolidge comet was still wagging its tail a magazine writer recommended to the then young and still unsullied Hoover Administration the following measures:

1. The collection and maintenance of dependable employment statistics.
2. A reliable system of labor exchanges.
3. An intelligent program for the construction of public works to absorb a part at least of the labor surplus.
4. A system of unemployment insurance.
5. The gradual reduction of the hours of labor to equalize technical improvements.

All these troubles afflicted apparently even that prosperous era. What did the Hoover Administration do? As I remember it, hardly anything. It was Senator Wagner, often hindered by the Hoover Administration, who set the ball rolling.

Why bring this up? Well, Mr. Hoover might want to run again.
Washington, July 8. F. VETTER.

An Aryan Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this country there have been many intermarriages between people of different races, which result in mongrel and hybrid children. Stockholders spend thousands of dollars for pure-blooded cattle and thoroughbred animals and have no use for mongrels or animals of mixed or uncertain breeds, and yet man marries outside his own race and the result is children of mixed races. Physicians claim that children of two races generally inherit the worst and not the best of either race, unfortunately. A READER.

Well Out at Sea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If President Roosevelt needs a holiday—which is perfectly understandable—and if he likes to go off on a sea trip where he can't be pestered with affairs—or misaffairs—of state, it might be thought unkind, and certainly ill-advised, for anyone to object. It might also be unkind to point out that most of the Chief Executive's acts manage to keep his name free of responsibility for trouble. With the President well out at sea, all the strikes, the labor troubles, the code troubles, &c., are ours, not his. Any dubious politics his Farleys and his Michelsons put over in regard to the Congressional elections are their troubles, not his. But just the same—and kind or not—there is one question that every citizen has a right to ask of his elected Chief Executive. While he is away and beyond responsibility, just who is running the country?

MARGERY HARRIS.
Menlo Park, Calif., July 3.

"An Ounce of Prevention—."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Sixty Poisoned in District's Relief Home," says a notice in The Post of July 9, and now the health office is examining some of the food to ascertain the cause!

Some years ago Dr. Betts made a careful examination into the cause of illness in certain groups that had been poisoned by the food at church suppers, parties, &c., &c. He found that foods containing acids that had remained for a while in aluminum containers, caused the salts of aluminum and the lead alloy in them to be dissolved, and this furnished a violent poison when taken in salads and other foods containing acids.

The law should prohibit the use of lead in the manufacture of aluminum if it is to be used for cooking purposes.

"Life Minus Ten Months"

A legal question has been raised in the Austrian courts which is probably without a parallel in the history of jurisprudence. How long will a man have to stay in prison in order to serve a life sentence minus ten months? The problem recently appeared in the case of a man who committed a murder about a year ago. He was found guilty by the trial court and sentenced to life imprisonment, but the case was appealed by his lawyer on the ground that under the Austrian law every defendant sentenced to prison is entitled to the benefit of the time he served in jail awaiting trial.

In this instance the convicted man had spent ten months in jail. Apparently the law on which the appeal was based had never been invoked before in the case of a life sentence, but its validity was immediately recognized by the Court of Appeals, which ruled that the man should serve the life term "minus the ten months already served in jail."

Any further controversy is plainly settled by this polite judicial submission to a fundamental law. The established right of the prisoner is maintained in the revised sentence, but nobody is able to see how the force of the original sentence is in any way impaired. The defense attorney is completely bewildered. He can not figure how his client is going to get the benefit of the ten months of freedom specified in the court's ruling, nor can anybody else in Austria.

But the Appeals Court is not worrying over that. All the provisions of law have been complied with and the matter is ended as far as courts are concerned. The stunt of making a prophetic subtraction of ten months from a life sentence is something for the lawyer and his client to worry about.

YOU don't like cats?

Then you dislike them.

According to those who say they know, it has to be one thing or the other. You may have no opinions about the New Deal or Old Glory. You may be quite neutral on the subject of dogs or snakes. But there is no middle ground in the feline field. Nelson Antrim Crawford says so, and he is an authority. He says so in the Psychoanalytic Review, and it is an authority, too.

Mr. Crawford says: "From earliest times the cat has been so invested with emotional import that it can not be viewed coolly."

And if you don't like the cat, you are suffering from some degree of "allurophobia"—which, as you, of course, know very well, is that dread disease, cat fear.

"Actually," says Mr. Crawford, "all dislike for cats is essentially fear of cats. That it does not develop into the pathological symptoms immediately recognizable as allurophobia is due to its not being severe or to its being suppressed."

Anyhow, we once knew a woman who had it. She didn't have to see or hear an intruding cat to know that it had entered the room where she was. Her screams were calculated to disconcert the cat as much as the cat disconcerted her. Also we knew Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, who, though he wrote a book on cat fear, admitted that he possessed no theory as to its causes, save in certain rare instances "where the emanations from a cat's fur gave rise to asthmatic symptoms."

Some of Dr. Mitchell's medical contemporaries thought that allurophobia resulted, in adult life, from some fright caused by a cat in childhood. Some of the authorities in the early days of this century traced cat fear to "a racial memory of the time when mankind was in constant terror of the saber-toothed tiger."

But Mr. Crawford thinks that the present psychologists have got far beyond the nerve specialists of those remote periods. "Allurophobia," writes Mr. Crawford, "is simply one of the many phobias that afflict human beings." And of course this explains everything! Allurophobia is "comparable to agoraphobia (fear of open places) and topophobia (fear of moving), but is more common than these and consequently less likely to be recognized as clearly neurotic. The physical and hysterical symptoms tend to be much alike, however, in all phobias."

Well, then, according to the psychoanalytic school, a phobia is a psychic phenomenon caused by contention between two desires that are equal and opposite. Generally one of these is physical and the other moral. In short, the sufferer suffers because he wants to do something that he knows very well he ought not to do. And if that's all there is to it, we'd say phobias are both as common as Freud thinks they are—and a lot less abstruse.

But wait a minute.

"The phobia," says Mr. Crawford, pursuing the psychoanalytic formula, "is a compromise in the conflict, a truce enforced with the aid of anxiety. It follows that the victim of a phobia does not fear the object as such, but rather as a symbol."

It follows!

Do you?

"The object, whether it is an open space or a cat, typifies something for which the person yearns, but which he has relinquished, or thinks he has relinquished, usually for purported ethical reasons. The yearning that arises afresh upon sight of the symbol is thwarted and thus converted into fear."

And of what is the cat a symbol? Mr. Crawford says that, for those who fear it, it is the symbol of all sorts of wicked things, down to "the devotee on whose body the devil's Black Mass is celebrated. Fear of cats or antipathy for them is thus always symbolic, associated with persons, with feared or disliked traits in the individual's own character, and often with folklore and tradition."

For cat-lovers, on the other hand, Mr. Crawford supplies the reverse English. Those who care for cats—and he confesses to being in this class himself—often "identify them," he believes, "with persons whom in childhood we admired." It may be, apparently, merely a dear old mother whom, save when a cat's around, we recall solely upon Mother's Day. Or it may be the marvelous Raggedy Man whose stories made him at once our young example and despair. "And we see in them (the cats) our best qualities, or those which we long to possess."

So there you are. It has but to be stated to be understood—even by the Post Impressionist's intelligence.

However, we want to make two confessions about it.

Firstly, since reading Mr. Crawford, we have tried our level best to like cats—and we have failed. And we have tried our level best to dislike cats—and we have failed again. There must be something terribly abnormal in our psyche, yet, Mr. Crawford and the whole psychoanalytic army to the contrary notwithstanding, we are just totally indifferent to cats.

Now for the secondly.

Secondly, we could wish that Mr. Crawford would visit Washington and come to the office of this newspaper. We should like him to see our office cat. And then we should like him to tell us, under oath, whether this animal even faintly reminds him of anything that ever lived, at any time, anywhere.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

For the Primary Grades.

THERE is no greater evidence of Attorney General Cummings' joviality and easy-going nature than the statement which he let the Democratic publicity department assign to him a few days ago. Generally speaking, these statements that are now flowing daily from both the Republican and Democratic sides are done in the respective publicity departments and put forth as the wisdom of some particular official or party personage.

BARGERON

I assume this was the case in the Attorney General's statement. I should hate to think he wrote it himself. A charitable explanation is that it came from the publicity department in the Democratic National committee, that in looking around for a name to attach to this particular statement they communicated with the Attorney General and asked if he would sponsor it.

* * * *

If this be true, the Attorney General's good nature was imposed upon. He deserved a better statement. He should have insisted upon one. It was about as childish, as amateurish as any statement we have had around here for a long time.

Fears that the Constitution will be violated are absurd, the Attorney General was, in effect, quoted as saying, because Mr. Roosevelt for one thing, knows law and would not let an un-Constitutional thing get by, and besides there is Mr. Cummings himself. Certainly he is a lawyer and knows the Constitution. With these two Constitutional bulwarks, how in the name of goodness could the Administration do anything un-Constitutional.

There is logic for you, clear-cut, all-inclusive reasoning which should remove all doubt and allay all fears. One hopes fervently, however, that for the sake of the New Deal it will not be the sort of logic he or his assistants pursue when the controverted New Deal measures come before the Supreme Court.

The fact is, of course, that there are lawyers who contend some of the measures are un-Constitutional and the Attorney General's opinion carries no more weight than theirs. They are all lawyers, students of the same laws. The difference is that the Attorney General works for the Government and represents it. The Constitutionality of the laws in controversy will not be determined until they reach the Supreme Court, when Mr. Cummings' aids, more particularly his Solicitor General, will argue that they are Constitutional and the opposing lawyers will argue that they aren't. Then the decision will probably be on that five-to-four basis, showing just how flimsy the Attorney General's opinion really is in our Governmental scheme.

It is a fact also that the Administration is so doubtful of some phases of its New Deal that it has purposely sought to delay the Supreme Court test on the assumption that the emergency need for these measures would cease to exist or that in time they would become so inextricably woven into our economic pattern that the high court would not dare to try to take them out.

* * * *

What I think happened in this instance is that the Democratic publicity department sought to give some training to its Young Democrat branch. The Democrats have quite a youth movement as an adjunct to their party. What would be more natural than, as they train them in the art of politics, they should see the need of training them in the greatest of all political arts—propaganda.

This statement sponsored by the Attorney General must have been intended for the primary grades. It must have come from primary pens.

But what intrigues me is why the propaganda dispensers in looking around for some one to sponsor this primary output should select the Attorney General. Surely he's not considered a young Democrat.

Control by State Of City Funds Seen

W. Va. U. Bureau Expects Action by Legislature.

Morgantown, W. Va., July 11 (Spl.).—West Virginia University's bureau of government research, sometimes called the State's "brain trust," has outlined an eleven-point program summarizing "the trends for the next sitting of the Legislature.

"The broadening of State supervision over local expenditures," heads the list of legislation which the board regards as most probable.

Gov. Kump said the bureau has "thorough and accurate knowledge of the needs of the State," and that while he has not yet studied the bulletin, he believes "it will be helpful."

Augusta Wheat Growers Elect East as President

Staunton, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—John H. East, of Churchville, has been elected president of the Augusta County Wheat Production Control Association, other officers being J. K. Livesay, vice president; P. C. Manley, secretary; H. M. Hamilton, treasurer, with F. D. Carson and S. H. Brenaman as members of the county allotment committee.

County Agent J. C. Coiner announces that Augusta County farmers who participated in the wheat-hog-corn Federal program in the present year will receive more than $200,000. This will be shared by about 2,800 farmers.

G. O. P. Leader Scores Rule by Bureaucrats

Mrs. George J. Wyeth Calls on Both Parties to Aid in Fight for Constitutional Regime in Talk at U. of Va.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Mrs. George J. Wyeth, president of the Woman's National Republican Club, today made a sweeping denunciation of the activities of the "unelected" New Dealers in an address to the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Citing "various departures from the Constitution which had subjected private citizens and industries to the mercies of bureaucracies," she asked Republican and Democrats alike to return to a Government of "laws and not of personalities."

Mrs. Wyeth asserted that "special pleaders, skilled in the use of words, go about the country teaching that it is possible to suspend for a year or two or three all hitherto accepted rules. They promise economic security—guaranteed by charts and graphs of their own drawing—if only the people, all the people, will relinquish certain ancient inalienable rights.

"'New lamps for old,' they cry.

"'What is your independence worth when times are hard? For your old lamp of freedom to undertake whatever work you want to do we offer a bright new lamp of something for nothing.'

Hits 'Insincerity.'

"The old lamp of freedom is brought down from the high shelf on which it stood, secure and unregarded, through the long years of America's safe living.

"It is beginning to be generally understood that men have secured the passage of laws—and are trying to persuade the country to accept them—which have for their real purpose the overturn of this republic. We would not take from these men their liberty to advocate whatever form of government they prefer, but we protest the insincerity which, under the guise of accomplishing one result, intends the achievement of another which they dare not champion openly."

The Republican leader asserted that the responsibility rested with both major political parties to check the "personal rule" of those who have set out to destroy democratic institutions.

She declared that "idle criticism is today as wrong as the shallow panaceas which we oppose."

"We do not merely denounce present trends. We pledge ourselves to the continuance of constitutional government under which we may grow in ability to meet the grave problems of this dangerous time."

Cites Promises.

Dr. Carmen Haider, professor of social science at Fordham University, told the round table, which is discussing the NRA, that labor gains promised under the reign of the recovery act have failed to materialize.

"The prediction was made," she said, "that labor, in addition to a reduction in unemployment, would realize the following gains under the NRA: Elimination of child labor; shorter working hours; increased wages, and the recognition and acceptance of the right of organization and collective bargaining as it was supposed to be guaranteed.

"An examination of the predictions show that not only have they not materialized, but in some respects the workers are worse off than they were a year ago."

Dr. Gustav Peck, of the Labor Advisory Board, replied that the NRA was making every effort to establish collective bargaining, but it had been difficult to strike a voluntary accord between employers and workers. He pointed out that workers may be receiving lower wages than they were a year ago, but it was only fair that they should assume some of the burden along with employers in getting millions of men back to work.

"Trend Toward Fascism."

Dr. Haider said the NRA clearly reflects the "class character as an attempt of capitalists to find a way out of the economic crisis by thrusting the burden on workers and farmers."

"Its development day by day," she asserted, "reveals more clearly a marked trend toward fascism in the United States."

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, outlined Government policies in the regulation of utilities.

In speaking of current economic unrest, Mr. McNinch suggested that those who are preaching "economic revolution" might well support an "economic evolution" from the Old Order to the New Deal.

Speaking of racial and religious differences before the round table on "Protestant-Catholic-Jewish Relationship in America," Dr. John Lapp, of Marquette University, declared these misunderstandings nearly always resulted from men and organizations "selling prejudice for profit."

The Ku Klux Klan movement was a commercial enterprise, he said, and during the 1928 Presidential campaign, both political parties used the religious question for personal advantage.

Views on Far East.

The growing importance of the exchange of news between the United States and the Orient was explained by the forum studying Far Eastern affairs, by Grover Clark, of New York, consulting expert on Asiatic problems.

China and Japan, he said, have considerable interest in current news from this country. The Chinese are particularly concerned over their investments in the United States, Mr. Clark said.

Japan's rise to a world power, he pointed out, created a demand for everyday news of the rest of the world. The Japanese, he added, depend to a large extent on United States news agencies for information on world markets and finance, and what is being done about peace and disarmament efforts.

The United States, he said, is looking more and more to the Far East and is in turn vitally interested in what is going on there.

Footnotes and Gossip.

ROCKWELL KENT, soon to visit Greenland for two years, had a brilliant idea as a young man when his parents balked at supporting him as an artist. He was already married and had a child—so you will grant him the necessity of doing some thinking. The upshot was that he "incorporated" himself, sold $5,000 worth of shares in Rockwell Kent common, and went off to Alaska for a year. Here the main lines of his style seem to have been laid down, and here was gathered the material which came out in his book, "Wilderness." Now Mr. Kent is one of the highest-paid artists in America, and that common stock, if it is still out, ought to be booming. * * * Mr. Kent has a story, illustrated by himself, in the July Esquire. * * * Why don't more young writers and artists try "incorporating?" * * * Lion Feuchtwanger celebrated his fiftieth birthday anniversary last Saturday. * * * On Doubleday, Doran's fall list are promised "Captain Caution," an historical sea tale by Kenneth Roberts; "Captain Nicholas," a lightish novel by Hugh Walpole; a biography, "Francis the First," by Francis Hackett of "Henry the Eighth" fame; a re-creation (based on the three historical facts known) of the life of "Omar Khayyam," by Harold "Genghis Khan" Lamb; and a book of poems, "Basket for a Fair," by Laura Benet, sister of W. R. and Stephen Vincent.

Eugene Manlove Rhodes, former cowboy and jack-of-all trades, writer of dozens of as truthful and realistic ranch-life stories as have ever been done, died on June 27 in California at the age of 65. His last book, "Beyond the Desert," is already in type and will be issued in September by Houghton Mifflin, his publishers. * * * Another loss to the reading world is the death of Charles S. Brooks in Cleveland on June 29. By no means as widely known as he deserved, Mr. Brooks was a writer of essays and travel books of a peculiarly subtle and delightful sort. Among them, published by Harcourt Brace, were "Roundabout to Canterbury" and "Roads to the North." But it is perhaps the theater which will remember him best, for in 1914, in Cleveland, he founded the group of amateurs which afterward became famous as the Cleveland Playhouse, called by Kenneth McGowan "the best little theater in the country" * * * And Thorne Smith, too, is dead, at Sarasota, Fla., at the age of 45, with but 70 pages of "The Glorious Pool" in the hands of Doubleday Doran. Merely reading the blurb of that projected extravaganza in the advance catalogue, I burst into chuckles. An odd obituary, this—but I think the gentle Thorne Smith would have liked it.

James Norman Hall has arrived in this country from Tahiti to spend the summer. He brings the manuscript of "Pitcairn's Island" (the third of the "Bounty" trilogy, written with Charles Nordhoff) to Little, Brown, and the manuscript of "The Tale of a Shipwreck" (his own work) to Houghton Mifflin. Both books are slated for fall publication. * * * Vera Brittain, author of that heart-rending war book "Testament of Youth" (MacMillan), is coming to this country in October for an eight weeks' lecture tour. * * * Miss I. A. R. Wylie is spending the summer in Rusia. * * * T. S. Stribling goes back to Gloucester—his favorite vacation haunt. Already he has plotted another novel.

Miss Josephine Lawrence, author of "Years Are So Long" (Stokes), got her title, not from Shakespeare, the Bible, or Bartlett's "Quotations," but out of a loud-speaker. With script off to publisher, she was still short of a title. One night a neighbor's radio crooned forth the old song: "Sing Me to Sleep."

"Love, I am lonely,
Years are so long;
I love you only,
You and your song."

And there was her title. Her novel, by the way, and Marguerite Steen's "Matador" are the dual selections for July of the Book of the Month Club.

Speaking of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations," Christopher Morley has accepted from the hands of Little Brown the editorship of the coming eleventh edition. Coming, that is, in 1936. * * * Eddie Cantor, with the help of his regular collaborator, David Freedman, has written a lively biography of his close friend "Ziggy" — "Ziegfeld: The Great Glorifier." Alfred King will publish it in October. * * * MacMillan, on the occasion of Cambridge University's 400th anniversary, is reissuing the "Cambridge Modern History" in September for $32 ($28.50 if ordered before publication). These famous 13 volumes, perhaps the standard history of the world since the Renaissance, have never before sold for less than $91. * * * Dr. Destouches (Louis-Ferdinand Celine, of "Journey to the End of the Night"—Little, Brown) has arrived in New York. Being a shy man and hating publicity, his publishers make the visit no excuse for the usual dinners, luncheons and cocktail parties.

The Once Over

IMAGINARY INTERVIEWS.

No. 3,456—Senator Borah.

Question. Senator, in your recent radio speech you said you would be heard from again in October. Why wait that long?

Answer. I am practicing self-control, and it will take all summer.

Q. You refer to the old-time naked Americanism; has America ever been more naked than she is today?

A. I was not speaking of wearing apparel; I'm not that old-fashioned!

Q. You also referred to Americanism naked and unashamed; what about that?

A. I admit the unashamed part was superfluous.

Q. You are not advocating a new Borah movement to be known as the Nude Deal, are you?

A. Stop joking; a Borah is never facetious.

* * * *

Q. Senator, why do you come out when the President's out of the country and attack his policies?

A. When he is out of the country is the only time anybody else can get the radio.

Q. Did you approve of the country's course under the Republicans?

A. No; I loudly advocated a change.

Q. And now why do you attack the Democrats?

A. I got the change!

* * * *

Q. Are you opposed to the President's "pump priming" acts?

A. As an old farmhand I see a vast difference between priming a pump to get water and pouring champagne down a well to get bedtime stories.

Q. Under the Republicans we didn't even get bedtime stories.

A. From that remark I can see that you didn't read those stock and bond flotation circulars.

* * * *

Q. Are you also against Mr. Roosevelt's policy of using quarterback tactics and shifting the play as the occasion may require?

A. It looks to me like trying to play Tom Thumb golf on polo ponies.

* * * *

Q. In a grave crisis like this, do you consider it patriotic and proper to attack the President of the United States?

A. Maybe not, but one winter with the Democrats is enough to throw any man of my temperament off balance.

Q. Are you in any sense a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1936?

A. Certainly not.

Q. Why not?

A. I might get elected President—and then what a hole I'd be in!!!

So That's It.

Aluminum Suit Case Remanded for Trial

A story in yesterday's Post said that a United States Circuit Court of Appeals had reversed a verdict for the Aluminum Co. of America in a $3,000,000 damage suit brought last December in Connecticut by the Baush Machine Tool Co., of Massachusetts.

A paragraph which unfortunately was omitted from the story explained that the court had reversed the verdict and remanded the case for trial, leaving it in the status in which it was at the time the suit was filed. A new jury now will determine the merits of the case.

Mrs. Maggie Cowgill Is Buried at Frostburg

Frostburg, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Maggie Cowgill, 70, wife of William Cowgill, who died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Houston, Tex.

Besides her husband she is survived by one son, William Cowgill, of Frostburg; one daughter, Mrs. Robert Hamilton, at whose home she died, and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Ziler, Baltimore, and Mrs. Fred Kornhoff, this city. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery, this city.

Court Convenes Monday.

Wise, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Wise County Circuit Court will convene here next Monday for its July term, with Judge H. A. W. Skeen on the bench. The civil docket will consume approximately three weeks. The criminal docket, according to present indications, will be unusually short. The Wise County Bar Association will meet here on the opening day of court.

Katharine Cornell on Tour.

In June, our famous American actress, Katharine Cornell, returned to her home in New York from a tour of acting and play production that covered 16,853 miles; she played in many towns in Texas, all along the Pacific Coast, and all through the Middle and Far West. She played in regular legitimate theaters, in churches, in halls in burlesque houses, and, to her especial delight in some motion picture theaters—which, she said, was like getting a bit of her own back. Many in her audiences had never seen or heard real persons on the stage, only movies, and they said they were afraid to sit right down in front for fear it might flicker and be hard on the eyes.

In fact, the "road" has been considered by so many managers and actors as "dead" that there are now many towns in America not only that have no regular theater—that is very common and becoming more so—but there are towns that have never had a theater.

Katharine Cornell's bold adventure was a missionary enterprise. She could have remained in New York and played "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" indefinitely; but she is not made for a lazy or monotonous existence. She is an artist who, instead of seeing how little work she can do, wants to do as much as possible, and then somewhat more. As innumerable Americans can not go to the theater, she carried the theater to them. I don't know whether this is Mahomet going to the mountain or the mountain going to Mahomet—and I don't care.

Her tour was enormously successful. She took 39 people in the company and produced three plays—"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," Bernard Shaw's early play, "Candida," and Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

Like all great artists, she wants to act in Shakespeare, and she was delighted with the tremendous success of "Romeo and Juliet" on the road. If she stayed at a city for a whole week, she would put on the Shakespeare play Tuesday night and the audience would not be so large as for the other plays; then she would repeat Shakespeare on Friday night and on Saturday afternoon, with the result that the house was packed both times. The people who had heard Shakespeare on Tuesday went out and told all their friends; which is the best advertising in the world.

One of the reasons for the success of her road tour was that she took a competent company all of whom were intelligent and skillful players.

The United States of America and the cause of Art both owe Katharine Cornell a tremendous debt. She is a public benefactor.

Fleet Sets Jamestown's Society Pace

Summer Colonists From Capital Meet Many Friends There.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

With a part of the United States Fleet at Newport, R. I., for the summer, Jamestown, that small island town nearby, the stamping ground of Navy people stationed near there, will be the mecca this year for the many Washingtonians who have cottages in this quaint old town.

Mrs. Charles Langley has opened her cottage and, with her daughter, Mrs. Forrest Close, wife of Lieut. Close, U. S. N., and young Billy Close, is established for the summer. Lieut. Close is with the fleet at Newport. Mr. Langley, who is remaining in Washington this summer, joins Mrs. Langley for frequent week-ends at the Rhode Island cottage.

Lieut. and Mrs. Chester C. Wood, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. Langley, who have recently come to Washington from the West Coast, are occupying the home of Mr. and Mrs. Langley on Cedar parkway in Chevy Chase until autumn, when they will find a residence for the winter. Lieut. Wood is stationed in Washington for the present, and this evening he and Mrs. Wood will entertain at dinner informally.

Hamiltons Plan Sojourn.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hamilton will leave the end of the month for Jamestown to spend the rest of the season. Their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Victor Alfaro, who make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton in Spring Valley, are planning to spend most of the summer in Washington, taking short motor trips. Next Tuesday they will motor to Auburn, N. Y., to be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Carl Bullard, who formerly made their home in the Capital. Later in the month, Dr. and Mrs. Alfaro will go to Ocean City, Md., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis.

Mrs. Moulton K. Johnson and her sister, Miss Joanna Schroeder, have opened their summer home, Stone Seat, at Jamestown, for the season, and have with them Mrs. Johnson's younger daughter, Miss Caroline Johnson.

Miss Belle Johnson, another daughter of Mrs. Johnson, is in Europe, where she has been visiting the United States Vice Consul at Zurich, Switzerland, Mr. Francis LeCompte Spalding, and Mrs. Spalding. On her return to this country later in the season, Miss Johnson will join her family at Jamestown.

Stirlings to Jamestown.

Dr. and Mrs. Calhoun Stirling and their daughter, Miss Margheritta Stirling also will occupy their summer home at Jamestown, and Dr. Stirling and Mr. John Hamilton, who are close friends, will make trips back and forth to Washington during the summer.

Miss Alice Shepard already has opened her cottage for the season, as have Admiral and Mrs. Reginald Nicholson and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Lard.

Mrs. George Calvert and her two daughters, Miss Margaret Calvert and Miss Eleanor Calvert, will leave Washington Saturday for Jamestown, where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Eubanks, of New York, are spending several days at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Orme Exnicios and their two small daughters will leave tomorrow for Cape May, N. J., where they have taken a cottage for the remainder of the summer. Mr. Exnicios will remain with his family for two weeks and then will return to the Capital, joining them only for week-ends. In September Mr. Exnicios again will spend two weeks at the resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter and their children left Washington last week for Cape May, N. J., where they have leased a cottage for the summer. Mr. Van Devanter will return to the Capital today but will join his family for week-ends.

Recent Capital Bride

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

MRS. MARLOW PERRY,
whose marriage took place on Monday at the Kenwood Country Club. Mrs. Perry was formerly Miss Helen Elise Meushaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Conklin Meushaw.

Miss McClenahan Engaged to Wed

Sydney Stevens to Marry Philadelphia Girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McClenahan, of Philadelphia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elisabeth Lee McClenahan, and Mr. Sydney Gilman Stevens, of Westfield, N. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney G. Stevens, of Lynchburg, Va. Miss McClenahan attended Miss Fine's School at Princeton, N. J., and was graduated from the National Cathedral School in Washington. She made her debut in 1928 and is a member of the Junior League.

On her father's side she is a lineal descendant of Robert Morris and a collateral descendant of "Light Horse" Harry Lee, of Revolutionary fame.

Mr. Stevens was graduated from Princeton in 1930 and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of the Court Club of Princeton. He is a descendant of Mary Lindley Murry, of New York, a grandson of Henry A. Carrington and a great-great-grandson of Gov. William H. Cabell of Virginia and Judge Paul Carrington, also of Virginia. The marriage will take place in the autumn.

Countess Piccio Leases Residence

Plans Summer Sojourn on Eastern Shore.

Countess Piccio, formerly of Italy, has leased a house for the summer on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, near Easton.

Countess Piccio spends a part of each year in Washington, and also visits in Chicago, where she made her home before her marriage. She is a sister of Mr. David Bachelder, of Warrenton, Va., and an aunt of Mrs. Francis Spalding, the former Miss Loedana Prochnik, daughter of the Minister of Austria, Mr. Edgar Prochnik.

Mr. and Mrs. Spalding are now making their home in Zurich, Switzerland, where Mr. Spalding is United States Vice Consul.

Log Cabin Ball Hosts Listed On Committee

Mr. R. Walton Moore Will Serve on Virginia Group.

The Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore, has accepted an invitation to serve on the Virginia committee for the Starlight Cabin Ball to be held July 21 at a log cabin belonging to Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., situated on Lake Jackson. Many Virginians and members of the younger set of the Capital will attend.

Others on the Virginia committee are the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, Mrs. Blair Bannister; Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr., and Mr. Rixey Smith, secretary to Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Mrs. Smith. On the Washington committee are the First Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, and their daughter, Miss Mary Senate Howes who is chairman of the young ladies committee.

The young couples will dance to Southern tunes. Informal dance costumes will be worn, gaily colored cotton and organdie frocks for the girls and white linens for their escorts. Late in the evening a true Virginia supper will be served, with Virginia ham, fried chicken, beaten biscuits and other old Southern dishes on the menu.

Many who have cottages on Lake Jackson will entertain at house parties that week-end, among them Mrs. Ralph W. Howell, of Washington, who has a most charming summer home there.

Calvary M. E. Church unit of the board of managers of the Methodist Home for Aged held a lawn fete from 4 to 10 o'clock yesterday at the home, 4901 Connecticut avenue northwest. The proceeds will go to the home for the debt on the building. Mrs. J. C. Mulford was chairman of the committee on arrangements. Assisting her were Mrs. W. Alfred Falconer, Mrs. Edward M. Hall, Mrs. J. J. Hurly and Mrs. J. Frank Day.

Ashburns Depart Today for Canada

Justice and Mrs. Luhring to Join Them Later.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Q. Ashburn will leave Washington today by motor for Canada, where they will spend several weeks at Ste. Agathe, in the Laurentian Mountains.

Justice and Mrs. Oscar R. Luhring will leave Monday by motor and will join Gen. and Mrs. Ashburn at the mountain resort for a two-weeks stay.

About August 1 Justice and Mrs. Luhring will come to the Capital for a brief stay before starting on a trip to California. They will return to Washington in September.

Williamsons Leave For Mountain Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Williamson closed their apartment at the Shoreham yesterday and left on a motor trip to the Lake Placid Club in the Adirondacks of New York State.

Upon their return they will occupy the home of Maj. and Mrs. Edward A. Keys, at Bradley Hills, Md., which they have leased until October 1.

Consular Officer Feted at Dinner

Mr. James Penfield, vice consul to Canton, China, who is spending a leave of absence in Washington, will leave in September for San Francisco, from whence he will sail for Peiping, China, to assume his new duties.

Mr. Penfield was the honor guest at a dinner last evening on the Club Michel roof.

Maj. Sheppard Visits En Route to Presidio

Maj. Paul R. E. Sheppard, U. S. A., and Mrs. Sheppard and their two daughters, Miss Pauline Sheppard and Miss Leda Sheppard, have arrived in Washington from Panama, where Maj. Sheppard has been on duty. They are the guests of Capt. John W. Thomason, jr., U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Thomason, in their home in Spring Valley.

Maj. Sheppard, a brother of Senator Morris Sheppard, and his family will leave shortly for San Francisco, where he will assume his duties at the Presidio.

Col. and Mrs. Hayes Plan Summer Travels Abroad

Col. James Hayes, of New York, who is spending several days at the Mayflower Hotel, will sail from New York for Europe aboard the Bremen July 18, accompanied by Mrs. Hayes.

They will go to Zurich, Switzerland, to remain until August 10 when they will go to London. Later in the season they will go to Scotland for two weeks of grouse shooting, before returning to their home in New York.

Dr. Hageage Weds Sally Janes In Park View Church Nuptials

Couple Receive Guests at Residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Hageage—Depart Later on Honeymoon—Will Make Home at Bland, Va.

Miss Sally Janes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Janes, of Goldston, Oreg., was married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon to Dr. Charles Hageage, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hageage, of Washington, in the Park View Christian Church here. The Rev. Walter F. Smith, officiated. The church was decorated with white gladioli and phlox against a background of palms and ferns. Mrs. Charles McLendon sang, accompanied by Mrs. Winegard at the organ, preceding the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, of Kenilworth, Md., wore a gown of white lace, fashioned with a long-sleeved jacket, the back of which formed a train. Her tulle veil was held in place with clusters of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Henry Clay Hankins, of Charleston, W. Va., was the matron of honor, and wore a picture frock of blue organdie, made with a long flaring skirt and short sleeves. Her hat was of blue, the crown of petals and the brim of net. She carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses. Miss Tieffa Hageage, sister of the bridegroom, who was the maid of honor, wore a yellow costume similar to that of the matron of honor, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

Dr. George Hageage was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Dr. Russell Edmonston and Dr. Frank Sharpe, who were classmates of the bridegroom at Georgetown University Medical School.

A wedding reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Mrs. Hageage, mother of the bridegroom, assisted the couple in receiving. She wore a green lace gown and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Hutchinson, aunt of the bride, who also assisted, wore a gown of powder blue crepe with a large blue hat and a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson, with whom the bride has made her home while in Washington, entertained at a reception in honor of the bride and bridegroom Tuesday evening.

Daring Bidding.

Today's hand must be accepted in the spirit of good, clean fun. The North and South players, and particularly the North player, were guilty of one of the worst bits of overbidding I have seen in a long while. North had some slight excuse and some bit of logic behind his bids but it still took very careful and very sound defense by his partner to eventually bring about the defeat of the East and West partnership.

South, Dealer
North and South vulnerable

1♣	Pass (1)	Pass (2)	1♠
1NT (3)	2♣ (4)	2◇ (5)	2♡
Dbl.	2♠	Dbl. (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—West naturally passes, hoping against hope that his vulnerable opponents will play the hand in clubs.

2—A very sound pass.

3—South has an enormous hand and quite correctly decides to make some further bid. He does not bid more than one notrump as he knows his partner must have a Yarborough or near Yarborough.

4—West, with seven cards in the club suit, quite correctly shows it, knowing because he has passed on the first round that his partner will not misread the bid as a Force.

5—This bid by North is not particularly bad. He knows his partner has a very strong hand and some support for diamonds. He also knows that the bid can not drastically mislead South since he has passed to the one-club bid on the first round.

6—This Double by North is sporting, to say the least. Despite the fact that his partner's notrump bid should show something in spades, and despite the fact that his own hand contains four cards to the Jack in that suit, the Double is still definitely bad. If the opponents fulfill their contract, they will score a game, and even though North suspects South has a very big hand, he still has no way of telling that it is quite as big as it actually is. South has actually underbid.

South, however, came to his partner's rescue. He immediately decided against the more or less natural Opening of the diamond King, realizing that since North had passed to one club, the diamond suit in the North hand did not have to be topped by a high honor. South further reasoned that with his own enormous hand and his partner's Double, the opponents could only fulfill their contract by getting a ruff or two in Dummy. In an effort to immediately prevent this possibility, South opened the nine of trumps, a most unusual lead away from the Queen.

It is easily seen that after this lead the Declarer's case was hopeless. The Ace of spades in Dummy won the first trick, and a heart was lost to South's Queen. South now laid down the Queen of spades, removing Dummy's last trump, and then was put in again with a second heart lead. He now tried to cash one club trick, but the Declarer ruffed and again put South in with a heart. South now, not being certain whether or not his partner had two "natural" trump tricks, carefully counted out the hand and gave his partner a ruff on the fourth round of hearts. North, of course, returned a diamond, and the Declarer in desperation had to finesse. South's diamond King was the fifth trick, and North's spade Jack provided the sixth and setting trick.

It is easily seen that any slight slip on the part of South, particularly on the Opening lead, would have enabled East and West to fulfill their contract. Frankly, I do not think that North deserved the set as his Double was just about as bad a one as I have ever seen.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Miss Gardner Weds Aug. 17 In Brookline

Engaged to Mr. Herrick, Grandson of Former Ambassador.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Katherine Peabody Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, jr., of Brookline, Mass., to Mr. Parmely Webb Herrick, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Parmely Webb Herrick, of Cleveland and New York, is of interest to Washington. Mr. Herrick is a grandson of the late Myron T. Herrick, former Ambassador to France and former Governor of Ohio.

Miss Gardner attended Miss Hall's School at Pittsfield, Mass., and later studied in Paris. She made her debut in 1933 at a dance given by her parents at the Ritz-Carlton in Boston, and is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club. On her mother's side she is a member of the Grosvenor family of Providence.

Mr. Herrick is a graduate of St. Paul's School, at Concord, N. H., and was graduated from Harvard last month. His clubs are the Stylus, Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, the A. D. and D. K. E. He is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Blackwell, of New York, of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart M. Aldrich, of Providence, and Mr. Harry A. Blackwell, of St. Louis. The Blackwell family originally came from Virginia.

The wedding will take place on August 17, in Trinity Church, Brookline, and will be followed by a reception at Green Hill, the Gardner residence.

Make-up Kit Excellent for Business Girl

It's Small and Inexpensive and Its Contents Quite Reliable.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE was a time when the business girl was supposed to burrow so deeply into the routine duties of the day that she had no time left to worry about her shiny nose. If she had an after-office engagement, that could take care of itself, she must go looking as well as a little soap and water and a fluff of powder would allow.

But those days are relegated to auld lang syne, and the business girl, like the woman of leisure, is expected to make the best of her appearance.

No matter what her salary is and how strictly it is budgeted she can still afford the essentials which keep her looking up to par. For only recently a beauty specialist has come forward with a minimum-priced make-up kit which contains all the ingredients necessary for a trim make-up job.

It is designed so the size is well adapted to a desk drawer. It contains first of all, a foundation lotion, powder, rouge, lipstick and a cleansing cream. In this compact container are the essentials for keeping a perfectly groomed countenance from 9 in the morning till office adjourns in the afternoon.

Despite the fact the kit sells for only $1 its contents may be highly recommended.

Dressing Table Lamps.

Summer isn't usually the time one is seized with the fever for redecorating. But a number of housewives who are marking time until their husbands' vacation rolls around find it interesting to retouch this room or that.

Take the guest room, for instance. Probably spring saw new drapes at the windows and new coverlets on the beds. But now that it's truly bargain time, what about some dressing table lamps? A Connecticut avenue shop has a general 10 per cent reduction which takes in a pair of ivory and rose lamps sure to add a certain something to any bedroom.

Those who see these lamps at their present price will realize what good buys they are. If they've priced others similar to these they'll be honestly impressed!

• • • •

What-Nots.

A certain piece of furniture which has a way with it is the what-not. No matter what time of the year it is featured it always has buyer appeal.

Now, as Washingtonians know, summer is considered a dead season. But despite that the buyer for the gift department in a large store has done so well with a group of what-nots she recently put on display that she's willing to believe summer is a pretty good sales time, after all.

These what-nots are walnut, always a safe bet. They would be attractive in the corner of a room furnished in early American style.

Strong Velvet.

The "velvet mitt" is anything but what its name implies. Fitted over the hand and then rubbed over one's leg it slowly removes surplus hair. Although it might be likened to an extra soothing sandpaper, it feels quite smooth and stimulating when rubbed over the skin. And don't worry about its abrasiveness, for used gently according to directions it removes the hair but doesn't irritate the skin.

It's well to keep in mind however, that where the surplus hair has a strong foothold the mitt won't accomplish a miracle overnight. In cases of this kind it should be used for several days in succession.

• • • •

Scientific Soap.

There's a small package of what one might call soap, except it does so much ordinary soap doesn't. A tablespoon of it whisked into a bowl of water is a tonic to silks and woolens. It preserves the strength of the fiber, gives them a long wearing quality, prevents shrinkage, and removes spots and stains.

Women who complain about the short life of their silk hose usually find this an excellent means to keep away runs and pesky little holes.

Considering all that one tablespoonful will do, and that the package costs only 25 cents, it's really amazing what a saving this scientific soap can be.

Don't be afraid to use it. It's safe for anything plain water won't harm.

• • • •

Lawn Chairs.

If a poet were rhapsodizing on the joys of summer surely he would mention the comfort of sitting in the garden in a late afternoon, sprawled in a lawn chair.

Those who haven't bought one because they took for granted the price would be burdensome haven't seen those at a downtown store which include foot-rest and canopy. They are only $1.39.

These may be used here and there in the garden or on a terrace porch. They're fine for resting—and even napping.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information. Or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Deft Hands Fashion Mexican Tortillas

Aztec and Spanish Influences Appear in Mexico's Kitchens

Not All Mexican Dishes Are Biting on the Tongue; Here Are a Few That Have Been Adapted for the American Housewife.

Its gods are gone, its temples are destroyed, its civilization has been shattered, but the Aztec color still threads its way through the pattern of Mexican life.

The ancient flavor has seeped into the Mexican kitchen. Here Spain has tempered and seasoned the Aztec dishes, and one finds a culinary art that is both old and new.

By Susan Mills.

PERSISTENTLY, like the sound of padded drums, is heard the pat-pat of women's hands as they make tortillas. Throughout Mexico, from capital to smallest hamlet, the same steady beat is heard.

Another sound mingles with the soft patting; the crunch of corn crumbling between stones. From the meal thus obtained the tortillas are made; tamales and enchiladas become the mainstays of the Mexican people.

But why the maize? It is both a tradition and a necessity. For when the corn of the Aztecs combines with the meats and spices of the Castilians, Mexico sets her table.

Through the warm air of the country drift magical and mystic rumors—gold they hid from Cortez—men tried to mine it and they died—there are herb charms in the market—an old Indian told me—they say he's a sorcerer—perhaps there is something under the lava.

Mingled Cultures.

In the cities there are mingled cultures, pottery of Indian design, bright sashes and sombreros, pink houses with wrought-iron balconies, model A Ford taxis and neon signs. In Mexico's menus, the maize and frijoles, chilies and tomatoes of the Aztecs mingle with chick peas and pork, cinnamon and certain fruits of Spain.

Fresh vegetables are in the minority in Mexico because in some areas they are hard to grow. The vitamin substitute is pulque, a drink made of the milky sap of the mangney plant. The sap, treated, ferments and contains about the same alcoholic content as beer. When distilled it becomes tequila or mescal. This beverage is consumed in large quantities by the natives, both adults and children. Why substitute more vegetables for the pulque to obtain dietary balance? The appeal is lost. One can not celebrate a fiesta with cabbages, but pulque is a fitting medium.

Though highly seasoned and often considered scorching, Mexican food is not as lurid as generally pictured. Eggs are always fresh, the bean dishes are justly popular. The mole, a hot Aztec sauce, and the chilis are tear-provoking, but a gourmet with a tender palate can enjoy the delicacies and tastefulness of Mexican food without its spicy strength.

To Be Practical.

To leave the local color for practicalities, here are a few recipes. The tortilla should be a good beginning. The Mexican woman makes it of the hand-ground corn, to which has been added a little lime water. Indian meal is a good substitute. Mix the meal with enough hot water to make a paste, add salt to taste, pat into flat cakes and bake on a griddle. Soapstone would be the best kind. These tortillas can be eaten with butter and honey, or they may form the basis of other dishes; the echilada, for example.

The echilada is the tortilla rolled around chopped meat or chicken, seasoned with onion or garlic and spices. The whole is covered with the special Mexican chili sauce, then sprinkled with goat's milk cheese. Parmesan cheese would be an adequate substitute.

Mexicans crystallize many fruits. They are boiled slowly in water until tender, then cooked in a sugar syrup until syrup is nearly absorbed, rolled in sugar and dried.

For the use of the American housewife here are some recipes simplified for her dinner table. Unfortunately many Mexican dishes can not be cooked in this country because of lack of necessary ingredients.

Chili Con Carne.

Boil until tender and cut in small pieces two pounds of beef with a large amount of fat. Cook two cups chili beans, placing in cold water and bringing to boiling point gradually. Mash and remove seeds from four chili peppers and boil with a clove of garlic. Press through a collander. Then boil all together, adding chopped tomatoes. Cook about 15 minutes, season with chili powder, and thicken if necessary with mashed beans.

Frijoles.

Cook two cups kidney beans until done. Put a tablespoon lard into a saucepan, when hot add a finely-chopped onion and some of the mashed beans. Add remainder of cooked beans, with their liquor, season and reheat. Serve with chili sauce if desired.

Russia steps behind the kitchen stove next week. Watch for the article on this page next Thursday.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

If you expect to accomplish anything on this July 12 you will have to put plenty of steam back of your work. If you simply sit and wait for business to come, there is a great possibility that the only result will be very disappointing.

A self-centered and irascible person may endeavor to impose on your good nature. It is advisable to keep your temper under control, but at the same time give evidence that you have plenty of backbone and cannot be browbeaten.

Should you receive a letter containing a rather ticklish question, with an answer requested, it might prove advisable to exercise a good deal of thought, as well as discretion, before complying with this request.

Conclusion to Love Affairs.

Complex financial matters will, in all probability, be satisfactorily solved, if the principal or their personal representative is seen, and frank statements made. Complications usually arise through misrepresentations and attempted evasions. July 12 may prove auspicious for those who try to bring long-standing love affairs to a happy conclusion. A good day for friends to get together for social relaxation.

If a woman and July 12 is your natal day, you are about due to have "Lady Luck" present you with some very agreeable surprises. You may hear from a friend who you thought had almost forgotten your existence.

You should be very fortunate in all matters pertaining to love. Matrimonial bonds should prove pleasant ones. There is a strong likelihood that men will pay you a great deal of attention. Be careful flattery does not turn your head and cause you to become "snippish." A woman of your type might find it wise to avoid extreme styles, and by being reasonably conservative in dress, avoid giving the impression you are an extreminst.

The child born on July 12, as it grows up, may display a peppery temper. When very young it should be taught to control its outbursts. Temper is something that can be controlled, if one does not get into the habit of indulging in it.

If a man and born on July 12, you are of the type that, if given the opportunity, you have the ability to successfully launch or manage enterprises of a national scope.

Ventilated Sandals Worn for Comfort and Chic

They Go Shopping With as Much Aplomb as They Go Dancing.

By Ames Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Comfort. There's a subject which certainly interests people at this season. And if you needed proof of that, you'd find it in shoes. For almost twice as many women are wearing cool, ventilated sandals on the street today as wore them a year ago. (And we have figures to corroborate that.)

Of course you expect sandals to be worn in the evening. But this summer they're worn all day long . . . anywhere and everywhere. Always, of course, in types appropriate for the place where they are going.

For general street wear you'll see them much like the shoe in the top sketch, with a medium amount of airification. Cut-outs, when they have them, are medium size. So are perforations which may replace cut-outs, as in the shoe sketched.

These street sandals need not have the wide-open shank, such as is illustrated. If your feet need more support, choose a sandal with a closed shank. It won't make much difference in the ultimate coolness.

Comfortable continental or Cuban heels are the rule. But there are new lower heeled ones, some only slightly over an inch in height and broad of base.

Doeskin, kid, calf, fabric-and-leather combinations, all-fabric, summer suede and kangaroo are fashionable choices of materials. White goes with light clothes and dark colors with dark clothes. Or dark ones go with light costumes when other accessories are dark.

Sandals for afternoon for tea or cocktailing, are more open then the street sandal and the heels are higher and lighter. In fact, they look just about like an evening sandal, except that their materials are usually less dressy. Pique, kidskin, crepe and suede are used, either in white or dyed to match the costume.

The afternoon sandal shown in the second sketch has modified cut-outs and closed toe. Some are open toed. And then, if you wear them for tea dancing, you must pick your partner carefully.

Sandals for the beach are cut to let your feet get sun-tanned. Toes are completely exposed, with only a band of material around the instep, as in the third illustration, or with strap bands running across or criss-cross.

Webbing, cording, canvas and rubber are used for the simplest ones while more elaborate types go in for kid or suede.

Soles are of rubber, cork, rope sponge, wood or leather. The same materials are used for heels which are apt to be novel in shape.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Tatiana Tchernavin is telling the true story of her life in Russia during the Soviet regime. Hardships followed one after another for the intellectuals, with fear dominating their thoughts. Now go on with this fact story.

A CATASTROPHE always comes suddenly, however long one may have been expecting it. We had endured a month of agony at nights, listening to every sound, and it happened almost in the daytime, as we came home from our work. It is easy not to find people at home at that hour, but an obliging Communist colleague rang up my husband upon the telephone.

"Are you at home? How are you?"

"Do you want anything of me?"

"No, nothing. I just wanted to ask if you were going away." A quarter of an hour later the OGPU agents came with an order for my husband's arrest.

I was kept late at the office, and when I came home all was over. Hardly anything had been touched; the search had been quite perfunctory, because the OGPU did not really care to find out the true states of things. A young man in civilian clothes lolled in an armchair, smoking a cigarette.

Home Was Gone.

That was all. But our home was gone. Life seemed to have gone out of everything around us. We moved about; my husband changed his clothes, packed his suitcase. I helped him in silence, but we did it quite mechanically. It all seemed unreal.

When all the formalities and preparations were over we sat down to tea; but we did not drink it. One could not swallow a single mouthful.

We had to wait for the OGPU car; with the great number of arrests, there were not enough cars to go round. We sat in silence, looking at each other for the last time. How many men had left home like this and never came back!

An hour passed. The OGPU young man made himself quite at home; he rang up his friends on our telephone, examined books and pictures, walked about the room, carelessly opened and shut the drawers—he was master here. We sat stiffly without moving and looked at each other in silence. One could not speak in front of an OGPU agent. And indeed, what could one say during those last moments?

Parting Imminent.

What happiness it is, I thought, to be still able to look at him, to see his tired face, pale and set. I knew that he was afraid of making the least movement for fear of losing his self-control, and I felt just the same. I gazed at him fixedly trying to imprint every feature in my memory forever; his head was slightly bent with an expression of utter weariness, his hair had begun to turn gray, the corners of his mouth were twitching slightly, his eyes . . . but one can't look into a man's eyes as such moments.

"How much longer will you be? Hurry up!" the OGPU young man said over the telephone.

We started. The boy had not come home yet. Will the father have to go away without saying good-by?

What a good thing I had sent the little girl to her mother! But there evidently was still time. We sat looking at each other as before. He, too, was probably trying to fix my face in his memory.

Grown Old Suddenly.

I had grown an old woman during those days. For two hours we were sitting thus, saying good-by as before death. Every minute that passed, one's heart grew heavier with the impending sense of loss. And our son was not at home. Poor child, what awaited him!

At last there was a ring.

"It's our son," I said. "May I open the door?"

The OGPU agent nodded.

I let in the boy, and before I had had time to say anything he rushed forward in alarm and stood stock-still seeing a stranger by his father's side. He sat down, poor child, and looked at us silently, not understanding what it all meant, what we were waiting for and why we looked at each other so strangely. He was trembling all over, not daring to ask anything.

The OGPU car hooted outside.

"Come along."

We all stood up. This was the end.

Farewell Said.

For the last time we saw him come up to us to say good-by, doing his utmost to control his emotion. We could not utter a single word. He held out his hand to me and the boy, looked at us for the last time, and walked out of the room. We let him go his sorrowful way and looked after him in silence.

That night there was nothing to wait for, no need to listen to anything. I put the child to bed and sat down beside him. His father was in prison; we were alone in the world. Tomorrow everyone would shun us like the plague. No help could come to us from anywhere. All that was left me in life was that corner by the child's bed, in the light circle of the lamp beside it, and somewhere, in incredible distance, the OGPU prison, his father and . . . perhaps, death.

The boy could not go to sleep; as soon as he dozed off he woke again with a pitiful cry, looked at me with frightened eyes, touched me with his little hands to make sure that I was still there and had not disappeared into the unknown like his father.

Feared Arrest.

I sat without any thoughts, as during those two hours when my husband and I were looking at each other. His pale, weary face was before me—that was all.

Tired out, my son dropped asleep at last, his face looking sad and thin. I had to go and clear up the study after the search. I went to the door and stopped . . . It was so difficult to go into the room that would never see him again.

I opened the door. The room smelt of the cigarettes that the OGPU agent had been smoking.

Never, never again could I get rid of the visible or invisible presence of OGPU! I did not know how long it would be before I, too, would be arrested—it was usual to imprison whole families. All Soviet citizens were in a noose which the OGPU tightened as they thought fit.

Burning anger filled my heart when I sat down to the writing-table, littered with papers, books and photographs, chucked on to it by the OGPU agent.

Culture Not Valued.

What did they care about ideas, about culture! They only needed it for newspapers and magazines published for the benefit of credulous foreigners. There they wrote about the bright new life being created in the U. S. S. R., about the wonderful progress of science upon which Socialism was being built. And here? How many of our professors and academicians had been spared? And those who were not imprisoned yet, in what conditions had they to work?

I got up to return to my room, but in the dark stumbled against the bed. The shirt which my husband had taken off before going lay on it. Not thinking what I was doing, I took it, pressed it to my face, and burst into sobs. Despair mastered me at last.

I do not know how long I lay there crying—the shirt was wet with my tears. Suddenly a far-off image dating back to my childhood rose in my weary brain.

Like Famed Story.

Chloe in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Tom is sold and Chloe is sobbing over his shirt, pressing it to her bread, black face. As a child I wept over poor Tom, as millions of other readers had wept before me, and now I was myself like Chloe. We had become slaves in "the freest country in the world." Tom was sold, and all I could hope for was that my husband should be "sold," too, and not shot. Perhaps, since he was a highly qualified expert, the OGPU would sell him to some other institution so as to receive 90 per cent of his earnings; then he would live. He would live like a slave. Without a home, without freedom or initiative, he would work while there was any strength left in him—and that would be a blessing, if, indeed, life was a blessing at all.

How to Keep Well

Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Mental Readjustments.

It is difficult for many of us to find and adopt a philosophy of life that will permit us to remain consistently happy. Every one needs to be on his guard so that success shall not unduly elate him nor defeats unduly depress him.

The mental reactions of most persons are in an extremely delicate balance. The nervous system will figuratively bruise more easily than will muscle. Thousands daily face disappointments and discouragements that will constitute trauma of the nervous system—blows that disturb, and if repeated often enough upset mental balance.

These intangible injuries require readjustments that may take from a few moments to several months.

The ability of the individual to adjust himself following nervous or emotional stress indicates that he possesses or does not possess strong mental and nervous reserve. One should be able to discount failure, grief or defeat, and by taking a long distance view of life assign to the incident its proper and probably minor value.

Defense Reaction.

The man who has not made the success in life to which he believes himself entitled sets up a defense by blaming somebody. He may blame his immediate superior who to his mind has failed to recognize his outstanding ability.

Later he may widen his territory and include the general manager, the president of the company and all the directors. This attitude is an attempt at self-justification.

A person unable to adjust himself, to dovetail into the work of an organization, utterly unable to cooperate, subsequently loses his position and becomes a hopeless drifter. No matter where he is or what he is doing he will blame some one for his lack of success. Such a case presents a real tragedy, for the individual has not learned and probably never will learn that any task, no matter how small, is worth doing well.

Don't Surrender.

Adjustments to distressing situations are ofttimes difficult, but they must be made by straight thinking and with a clear understanding that the factors causing mental depression are in many instances beyond the control of the individual.

Every thinking person must face realities and meet them with all the intelligence that he possesses. Abject surrender is unthinkable. In order to withstand the vicissitudes of life the unstable nervous system must be readjusted and in this process the assistance of intelligent friends and the counsel of an understanding physician is needed.

Movies Given In Church Is Pastor's Aim

WHICH shall it be: Church or the movies?

That weekly recurrent question, the rock on which many a family splits on Sunday nights, need no longer tear its perplexing head if a plan projected by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America goes through.

At an estimated cost of $2,000, the council seeks to create a film service buerau to select suitable pictures for presentation in churches desiring them. Such films would be exchanged between churches containing projection apparatus, according to the plan.

Only "suitable" subjects would be shown, it is explained by the Rev. Dr. Worth M. Tippy, head of the council's department of church of social service. Dr. Tippy has been cooperating in the National drive against objectionable moving pictures.

Dr. Tippy emphasized that complete pictures would be shown, not patched-up reels. Biographical pictures and others having sociological value, or showing the worth of religion in life, would be chosen. Favorably mentioned were "'I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Little Women," "Maedchen in Uniform," and recent films depicting the lives of Martin Luther and John Wesley.

Such showings in churches would not only help the drive against objectionable films, he pointed out, but would also help to "fill the churches on Sunday nights."

It is anticipated that 5,000 to 10,000, or an intermediate number of churches, might cooperate in the plan.

Pilgrims Seek Miracle Cure in Bosnian Church

Belgrade, July 11 (U.P.).—An endless stream of pilgrims crawled on hands and knees up a mountain near Jace, Bosnia, recently, seeking cures at the traditionally miraculous Franciscan Church.

The church is considered specially efficacious in curing mental ailments. Some pilgrims went in chains, attached to relatives.

Tomato Juice Keeps Flavor When Canned

Retains Those Necessary Vitamins Through the Winter, Also.

IF YOU have a good-sized crop of tomatoes this season and the family is fond of tomato juice, you can't do better than to can a supply of this delicious and useful product for next winter's needs. You can give it to the children, even to young babies. Or you can serve it for an appetizer at the beginning of dinner, or use it in tomato bouillon, or thicken it for tomato sauce, or jelly it for salad. Tomato juice is one of the easiest products to put up at home.

Perhaps you have heard people say tomato juice canned at home lacks vitamins, especially vitamin C. It is true vitamin C is sensitive to heat and air, and the method of canning does affect the amount of this vitamin that remains in the canned product. But tomatoes are rich in vitamin C to begin with, and their acidity helps to protect their natural store of this vitamin. So by taking precaution anybody can put up tomato juice rich enough in vitamins to be very valuable in the diet next winter.

The Main Points.

Here are the main points, according to the specialist in the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics:

Select firm, ripe tomatoes, fresh from the vines. Tomatoes and all other fruits and vegetables lose more of their vitamin value the longer they stand after picking.

Wash the tomatoes well, cut into pieces, remove cores, and be sure to discard all green, moldy or decayed portions. Green parts make the juice bitter, and even a few bad spots may change the flavor of the whole quantity of juice or cause it to spoil.

Handle the tomatoes in small lots and work fast. For instance, don't try to make more than 1 or 2 gallons of juice at a time, for if it has to stand it loses flavor and vitamin value.

Simmer, Don't Boil.

Simmer the tomatoes just enough to soften them. Don't boil them. Then immediately put them through a sieve fine enough to take out the seeds and skins but coarse enough to let the pulp through. Add one-half to one teaspoon of salt to each quart of juice. Or if you are canning the juice for infants or invalids leave out the salt.

If you are using glass jars, reheat the juice quickly just to boiling. (Don't let it boil for an instant longer than you can help.) Then pour into the hot sterilized jars, filling them completely, and seal at once. You don't even need to process the glass jars after sealing. Simply set them aside to cool out of drafts. But if you are using tin cans, then heat the tomato juice just to the simmering point, pour into the cans until they are full, seal, and process for 5 minutes in a boiling water bath, counting time when the water actually boils, not before. Cool the tin cans at once in running water.

Store the canned tomato juice in a cool, dark place. Light has a bad effect on the color and flavor of tomato juice in glass jars.

Absolute Quiet Hurts the Ears

ABSOLUTE quiet would be unbearable.

Such is the opinion of Bridgeport, Conn., research engineers who have just concluded an experiment in creating an approximately soundproof room.

To get their quiet room it was necessary for them to suspend it in space, leaving no rigid connection with the remainder of the building.

The ceiling, detached from the walls, was suspended from rafters; floor and walls hung as cushioned springs, and the interior was muffled and padded. The effect was a room floating free in space.

The ensuing silence was not kind to the ears. Noises from other parts of the building and from the floor below smote the atmosphere as feeling, not as sound. A visitor who snapped his fingers had the sensation of having set off a cannon. An ordinary noise, so slight as to be imperceptible in ordinary surroundings, sent the sensitive indicator of an audio noise meter in the silent room into a tailspin.

Washington Bachelors Discuss and Differ Over Requisites for Perfect Modern Girl

Women Must Be Companions And Dress Smartly, Says One

Wolcott Waggaman, Pendleton Hogan, William Horton Advocate Such Things as Pleasant Voices, Big Hats and Intelligence.

Potential charm exists in every woman. It is more of the spirit than of the flesh, and can be cultivated. Character, learning, graciousness, a margin of reserve, are things which can be cultivated and which all are part of charm. This is the tenth and concluding article in a series giving practical suggestions for personality development.

By Frances Mangum.

GONE the dream girls of decades past. The curly head in bouffant taffeta, the homemaker in the bungalow apron, the sleek siren in satin gowns! These offer no appeal to men of today.

At least, not to Washington bachelors. What then do these bachelors want of the modern girl? Let them speak for themselves:

"Companionability!" toasted Wolcott Clarke Waggaman, architect, over a stein of beer. "Women of today have to have it. They have to be interested in sports. They have to be interested in business, and able to discuss a man's side of it.

"They have to dress well, and by dressing well I don't mean expensively," amended Mr. Waggaman. "A girl can buy attractive dresses for very little, and then revamp them to suit her type."

Here Mr. Waggaman digressed to elaborate on his theory. "It seems to me American women make one big mistake in dress—in not playing their types. They strike out for exaggerations, confusion of line. If they planned their costumes in the same manner an architect plans a house their results would be infinitely more effective.

Admires the French.

"And then, of course, a girl has to be attractive looking. By that I don't mean pretty. I mean she simply has to make the best of her features. Accentuate the good ones. Play down the bad ones. She can do this by make-up, although American women seldom do. French women, however, have the art down pat. They strive to look natural. There's never a sign where rouge begins and powder leaves off."

Good taste is a necessary attribute, Mr. Waggaman believes.

"And good taste," he specified, "doesn't mean fingernails a mile long, nor painted a Chinese red. Nor talking in a voice like a loudspeaker!

"One usually associates a well-modulated voice with culture, and a loud one with lack of it. But some girls seem to believe the louder and longer they talk, the more of an impression they're making."

There are two things a woman can use to fine advantage, says Mr. Waggaman. One is an interesting voice and the other a large hat.

"You have to cultivate the voice, I suppose," he said, "and acquire a naturally attractive accent. I like the combination of a British and Southern accent, yet may the gods deliver me from too much of either.

"As for the big hat, that can be bought. What it is about them, I don't know. But they do something," he finished.

Another young bachelor, Pendleton Hogan, author of "The Bishop of Havana," which was selected by the Book-of-the-Month Club as an outstanding novel, also has definite ideas about attractiveness in woman.

"She must have intelligence. Intelligence—absolutely!" he declared. "But I'm not talking about the cut and dried and boring intelligence of the college scholar who wears horned rimmed glasses and a knot on the back of her head.

"I mean she has to have a wealth of information on which to draw, to be able to talk about many things. And to know more about one thing than the average person."

Mr. Hogan feels a great many girls do not try to talk intelligently for fear young men will think they're bluestockings.

"On the contrary," he says, "suppose a girl goes to a cocktail party and talks about something worthwhile, not just dances and the weather. There's going to be at least one man present who has intelligence enough to respond. And surely he's more worth her efforts than five or six dumbells.

"A girl ought to be able to listen well. But," Mr. Hogan sighed, "as a general thing they listen poorly—or not at all.

And Then Style.

"And she has to have style," he continued. "To my mind style isn't so much what you wear, as the way you wear it. If a girl has confidence, good posture and watches people who have style, she can pick it up too. As a general thing I think American women are the most stylish in the world."

Mr. Hogan sat for a minute in deep thought. "There's a certain quality which a really attractive woman has to have, but I'm confused about how to express it. Elusiveness—that's it! She must never let a man realize how much she likes him. Nothing bores the average man so much as to find out all about a woman the first time he takes her out. If she's wise she'll hold back.

"She has to have a sense of humor too, and be a good sport. If she cultivates an interest in outside things, small things, she'll be able to laugh more and better naturedly.

"As for good looks, certainly I believe a woman should have them, because I think every woman can. If she is painstaking about her dress, cultivates mannerisms which obscure her defects, develops her personal attractiveness, learns to talk, to listen, and to laugh, she can't help being attractive and looking attractive.

"She should be natural, be herself. But first of all she should make herself what she wants to be!"

Mr. Hogan feels there are two definitely attractive types of women. Queen Elizabeth represented one. Firm, determined, even slightly masculine. Mrs. Roosevelt, the other. Gracious, feminine, but active and interested.

A third bachelor has definite ideas, too. He is Howard Kenneth Baker, publicity man for St. John's Junior Guild.

"The first thing a woman needs to be attractive is character!" he declared. "She must be sympathetic, genuinely interested in life, and able to form her own opinions.

None of Those Jokes.

"Some women feel they appeal to men by telling risque jokes. As a matter of fact, this places them in a negative category. They never make themselves attractive this way. In fact, the reverse.

"As for the intellectual woman—it's hard to say. Personally, pure, undiluted intellect in a woman bores me to death. But brightness, quickness, wit—they're necessary," he said.

In the opinion of Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, U. S. A., retired, any woman can be attractive—if she is gracious. And how be gracious? The general gives a clear outline:

"A woman must remember to acknowledge introductions gracefully," he averred. "When she meets a person she makes her first impression and no matter how she looks, or how well she is dressed, it won't be favorable unless she is gracious.

"Secondly, she should always try to recognize people she has met. Instead of a mere 'how do you do,' it's much nicer and pleasanter to others if she makes an attempt to say something. It doesn't matter what. Some simple, pleasant little remark.

"Thirdly," Gen. Horton continued, "when she's speaking in a group she should make a point of talking to the whole group, and not center her conversation on one person to the exclusion of others.

"And while she is talking she should bear in mind that saying disagreeable things certainly doesn't make her more attractive. But saying agreeable things does—if she can say them sincerely. Some women are extremely careless about remarking how stout a person has grown and things like that. What good does it do"

On the other hand Gen. Horton does not think a woman enhances her magnetism by "gushing."

"Women who are always effusive, always flattering, very rarely ring true. People tire of them, distrust what they say, and certainly do not admire them!"

Gen. Horton firmly believes women who are unflaggingly considerate of others, who make an effort to maintain both a gracious and cheery manner, will never be found on the wallflower list.

ANY woman can be attractive—if she knows how, is the opinion of a group of Washington bachelors. They further insist she can learn how—if she tries. Style, grooming, good taste, and a pleasant speaking voice are necessary attributes suggested by Clarke Wolcott Waggaman, architect. A well rounded intelligence, illusiveness and a sense of humor are advocated by Pendleton Hogan, young author. Howard Kenneth Baker, publicity man for St. John's Junior Guild, admires the woman with character, sympathy and interest. Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, U. S. A., retired, lawyer, believes graciousness and cheeriness are inseparable from charm.

Curley Club To Assemble For Business

Chairmen of Committees to Be Named at Meeting Tonight.

MEMBERS of the Curley Club will assemble at 7:45 o'clock tonight at the Continental Hotel and will proceed to Forest Glen, Md., where they will hold a meeting as the guests of the Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, pastor of the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Club business will be considered during the meeting, including naming of the chairmen of the committees and the election of a sergeant at arms for the ensuing year. At the conclusion of the business meeting there will be an outdoor entertainment.

Miss Mary L. McGee, who has been reelected president of the club, will preside. Other officers recently elected include Miss Dorothy Barrett, vice president; Miss Gretchen Baden, treasurer; Miss Mary Connelly, recording secretary; Miss Monica Gordon, corresponding secretary; Frank Kirchoff, warden, and Hugh McGarvey, advocate. The Rev. Francis J. Kelly was elected chaplain.

Esther Council, Daughters of America, will formally install its newly elected officers tonight. Mrs. Mary Hoffman will preside.

Members of the Past Councilors Association of Esther Council will hold an outing August 4 at the summer home of Mrs. Nellie Riley at Colonial Beach, Va.

Mrs. Sadie T. Marze has been elected president of the Deanwood Parent-Teacher Association for the school year beginning in September.

Other officers are Eugene Compton, vice president; Sandy Jones, secretary; Mrs. T. V. Baltimore, assistant secretary; Mrs. Marie Yancey, treasurer; Mernie Jones, chairman of the program committee, and the Rev. Thomas Tilden, chaplain.

The morning book review section of the American Association of University Women will meet at 11 o'clock today in the lounge of the clubhouse.

Mrs. Frank E. Edington will review "Mutiny on the Bounty," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall.

Mrs. B. F. Langworthy has returned to her home in Winnetka, Ill., after spending three weeks in Washington in connection with her new duties as president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. She will visit Washington again in August, en route to Chautauqua, N. Y., for a Parent-Teacher meeting at Chautauqua Institute.

Image of Virgin Mary Said to Have Appeared

Southbridge, Mass., July 11 (U.P.). What some persons described as a full-length image in profile of the Virgin Mary attracted nearly 400 visitors today to the Pleasant street home of Mrs. Edmond Gaumond.

The image, created by a depression one-eighth of an inch deep in a wall, appeared suddenly Sunday in a second-floor bedroom, according to Mrs. Gaumond. The image's head, which is bowed, is covered with what resembles a nun's hood.

Mrs. Gaumond said she would report what she called the "miracle" to the Rev. Wilfred J. Racicot, curate of Notre Dame Church.

A California Product

EASTERN men are not so handsome as rugged Westerns. So thinks Miss Martha E. Segerstrom (above), of Sonora, Calif., who recently visited in Washington. She was accompanied by her father, Mr. Charles Segerstrom, president of the Carson Hills Gold Mine.

Young Chemist Recalls Patient From a Coma

Girl Interests Science With Her Discovery About Anesthetics.

IF A new fashion is introduced by a woman designer, a new recipe devised by a housewife, or a new interior decoration style promulgated by a feminine artist, the world is not surprised. But when a woman scientist makes a discovery, that is something to make everybody sit up and take notice.

And that is exactly what everybody who knows about it is doing at present in regard to the comparatively recent discovery of Miss Pearl Moorman, young woman chemist of Joplin, Mo. Termed "palinesthesia" in the scientific realm, the discovery has to do with recalling a patient from a general anesthetic by injecting minute amounts of hydrochloric acid into the blood stream.

Miss Moorman reasoned the state of insensibility induced by ether or chloroform was due to a lowering of the acidity of the blood. Assuming this was the case, she tried injections to raise the acidity in hope this would recall test animals from induced insensibility.

The first experiment with a human case occurred a few months ago when a patient reacted seriously to a conservative dose of a common anesthetic. Palinesthesia was resorted to with remarkable results, according to a report sent out by the hospital in which the experiment was made.

A Western Girl Journeys East: Finds Men Not Too Handsome

Martha Segerstrom Can't Be Very Enthusiastic Over Women's Clothes on This Side of the Continent, or the Heat and Humidity.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WEIGH the green of Washington against the spaciousness of California, and the former will be found wanting.

"For what does the green amount to, if it's not cool?"

This question came from Miss Martha Segerstrom, attractive 18-year-old native of California and daughter of the president of the Carson Hills gold mine.

Miss Segerstrom, accompanied by her father, recently visited in Washington and New York for the first time. After much coaxing on the part of her interviewer, she revealed some of the impressions of a Californian who glimpses the Capitol, the Washington Monument and the Potomac for the first time.

"The Capitol and the Monument are just what I expected," she said, "but the Potomac—well, frankly, it's pretty muddy compared with the clear streams we have out home. And the weather——"

It's That Humidity.

Yes, the weather. She confided the humidity was what it took to make her warmer than she had ever been in all her cool, California life.

Then the people. Eastern men, reputed to be handsome on the whole, lacked the clean-cut appearance and the hail-fellow-well-met attitude of the wide-shouldered, rugged Westerners.

"And women, both here and in New York, aren't so stylishly attired as I thought they would be," she continued. "The shops have enough lovely clothes in the windows, but what do they do with them? Few women here are as faultlessly attired as I expected them to be."

Very well. What, besides good-looking men and stylishly clad women, did Miss Segerstrom miss most away from home?

"The noise of the stamp mills," she said.

When a girl has spent most of her 18 years within hearing of a gold mine's stamp mill, she learns to go to sleep to its music, she explained.

Mining Family.

The mills are a part of the Carson Hills Gold Mine. Located in the Bret Harte country, 130 miles east of San Francisco, this mine has marked the country near Miss Segerstrom's home all her life. For it was here her ancestors settled in 1851 when they came from England by way of the Isthmus of Panama. Here her father has supervised work at the gold mine, and her grandparents before him.

And what did Miss Segerstrom do for amusement in California? Did Miss Segerstrom go in for dancing, reading, riding, or what?

"My favorite amusements are swimming and riding," she said. "Social life gives away to sports in our part of the country."

All right. And would she be happy to get back to California with its clear streams, delightful weather and handsome men?

Not especially. Seeing this part of the country for the first time was proving a great adventure.

"Besides, I expect to come back East sometime. I want to be a social welfare worker," she said, "and I know there's a wider field for that here than in California."

Rotten Row Horsemen Can't Ride There Now

London, July 11 (U.P.).—The socially-elect who rife horseback in London's famous Rotten Row were officially urged today to curtail their traditional exercise because of the drought.

William Ormesby-Gore, first commissioner of works, told a questioner in the House of Commons that sprinkling of Rotten Row had now ceased.

Therefore, he said, because of the dust raised by riders during the dry weather, inconveniencing other users of Hyde Park, "I take this opportunity of appealing publicly to all riders to give up using that part of the Row from Albert Gate to Hyde Park corner after 9 a. m. daily."

Polish Linen Worn There; It's an Order

Government Is a Fashion Dictator in Trying to Cut Imports.

WARSAW (AP).—Linen for soldiers, officials, and society women is decreed by no less a style dictator than the Polish government, which seeks thus to encourage the use of domestic products.

With the slogan "our land must feed and clothe us," the government seeks to cut down the amount of cotton imports, most of it from the United States. About $19,000,000 worth came in last year.

The Army First.

First to adopt the linen was the army, for whose summer uniforms $2,000,000 was appropriated. The ministry of public instruction, the department of posts and telegraphs, and other public offices also ordered that summer uniforms be of linen.

Bags for coins, salt, tobacco and similar articles are being made by state monopolies only out of linen.

Polish women, too, entered wholeheartedly into the drive. Mme. Jadwiga Beck, wife of the foreign minister, fostered the fashion of linen dresses trimmed with peasant embroidery.

To Foster Flax.

The slogan first was enunciated by Gen. Lucjan Zeligowski, the leader who seized Wilno in 1920 and who now lives quietly on a farm near that town and grows flax. On that principle the government adopted a bill to foster the cultivation of flax and hemp.

Foodstuffs grown in Poland constitute one of her main exports, but for long she has had to import so many textiles that clothing material has formed 22 per cent of her imports.

Experimental work with flax and other fiber plants is being conducted at the University of Wilno. Another effort to stimulate interest in flax was made at an exposition here by exhibits designed to show the value of Polish linen in comparison with cotton products.

PILLAR to POST

SILLIMAN EVANS has recently leased a home in Baltimore, and his Washington friends are waiting with watering mouths for him to put on a Texas barbecue or perhaps one of his famous steak dinners.

Those folks from Texas like their red meat, and Silliman is highly skilled in ways of preparing it. While he was Fourth Assistant Postmaster General (he is now president of the Maryland Casualties Insurance Co.) he gave a steak dinner at the home of Red Leggett. It was a memorable stag affair. Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Farley were the ranking guests and several other notables were among the 25 who carried away beer mugs, each lettered with the name of the recipient.

The steak was prepared by Silliman with his own hands. But beforehand he asked Mrs. Leggett (she is the former Dagmar Carlson, of Fort Worth, known to her intimates as "Tex") to purchase, among other items, several dozen oranges. Ostensibly beer was planned as the only beverage, but Tex became a little suspicious. Since it was her house and her furniture that might be put in jeopardy she demanded to know what the oranges were for.

• • • •

"For the sauce that goes on the steak," answered Silliman. "I use oranges and garlic."

"Oranges and garlic!" exclaimed Tex, and she added a little dubiously, "what is the recipe? I might want to use it some time."

"That is a dead secret," said Silliman importantly. "I got it from an old sailor who made me promise I would never tell a woman."

Tex was wild to know the recipe. She begged and begged, but Silliman remained obdurately true to his vows of never telling a woman how he cooks steak.

Sad News Tale.

You've probably heard the story of the reporter who was sent to cover a wedding and who came back to the office mourning he didn't have a story because the church had burned down. But perhaps you haven't heard the story of a reporter in Washington, now a press agent for a lobbying organization.

• • • •

It was recalled by the recent incident played up on the front pages of New York newspapers concerning Mr. Walter Plunke, who sat on the ledge of a hotel window for three hours threatening to commit suicide with a fire department life net spread 20 stories below to catch him and a detective and a policeman in his room trying to argue him out of the notion.

• • • •

When the Rent Commission was abolished here after the war, a countess (nobody can remember her name) disputed the findings of the court that the emergency was at an end. She locked the door of her apartment against orders to dispossess her. This reporter for a local afternoon paper was sent with the officers who proposed to put her out forcibly. After the door had been broken in, they found the countess, like Mr. Plunke, of New York, sitting on the windowsill threatening to jump.

Following several hours of argument, the officers gave up, and the reporter returned to his city editor and said he had no story because the woman had not been evicted.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

A Reluctant Young Man Can Be Brought to Heel Easily.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been going with a young man now for about three years. At first we had only occasional dates. As time went on, we were together almost every night.

About six months ago he asked me not to go out with other people. At first I was terribly thrilled, for it seemed to indicate we were engaged. But during all this time he hasn't mentioned marriage to me, and to be perfectly frank, I'm getting sick and tired of the situation.

• • • •

I love him, and I want to marry him, but how can I tell him that? He says he loves me, but somehow has very little to say about "our" future. Would you continue to put up with this—or what? Don't forget I love him. IMPATIENT.

Be Elusive.

DEAR IMPATIENT: Your complacently possessive young man needs a jolt to his ego. The time-worn but only effective way of administering it is to register the best imitation of indifference you can muster.

Stop seeing him every night. But don't break off in such a manner that he suspects you of pique or pouting. Do it casually. Of course, you've lost ground with other potential suitors by letting this boy preempt all your evenings. But surely you have girl friends.

• • • •

Pass the word among them you're getting bored with your constant admirer. Convey the idea you'd appreciate being included in a double-date foursome with some other boy for a change. Let them fix it up.

Arrange for bridge evenings and theater parties among your girl friends; get away for an extended out-of-town visit if possible; conjure up a sudden filial devotion and insist upon sharing your parents' exclusive society on occasional evenings; join an evening art class—create as many interests as you possibly can from which he may be carelessly excluded without too much occasion for apology.

• • • •

This sudden seeming indifference to him, this brand-new interest in a world of affairs in which he has no part, should bring him to a speedy realization of his dependence upon your society.

Men are such helpless creatures of habit that the chances are practically 100-to-1 in your favor he'll be begging you to marry him in less than a month. As a matter of fact, by pursuing the tactics aforementioned, one girl I know brought a dilatory suitor to matrimonial terms in just two weeks' time.

The whole trouble is, you've let him take your society for granted. Jar him out of the consoling conviction that he's the sun, moon and stars in your universe and I dare to predict he'll never be content until he's legally and irrevocably reestablished himself as such.

M. H.

A Reader Agrees.

MY DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your advice to "PERPLEXED," the nurse, regarding her marrying the young man of 25, has touched me profoundly.

This woman, perplexed and bewildered, will bless you for bringing her out of chaotic doubt into sound, harmonious reasoning. I agree with your analysis of her problem and I feel she will be happy, the same as one of my acquaintances who was a widow and had several children besides.

• • • •

I have been married for 26 years, most of them stormy, clashing ones. However, after all, now our love for each other is like that beauty which promises to be "a joy forever——"

"It will never pass into nothingness." Y. O.

Chemistry Blamed For Women's Tears

Crying Without Cause Said to Be Woman's Fault.

When women weep without reason the cause is wrong chemistry.

Mental depression, of which feminine tears are one sign, is the result of upset balance of hormones, those chemical drugs produced in the body by certain endocrine glands.

This information is divulged by Dr. August A. Werner and Dr. George A. Johns in the St. Louis (Mo.) Journal of the American Medical Association.

Injection of one cubic centimeter of theelin hormone into women patients of "involutional melancholia," a form of severe despondency, in a number of cases showed most surprising results, the physicians state.

Bus Travel Is Popular, While Rates Go Lower

Reports by bus terminals show passenger traffic is 20 per cent better than last year.

Bus rates in the Eastern half of the country are the lowest ever put into effect. And long distance operators expect the volume of passenger traffic during the next two months to be the greatest in three years. During the last two weeks lines have increased their schedules to many points. At the same time express schedules running over shortened routes and eliminating many intermediate stops have been added.

Gay Amateurs Take a Stage Study Course

Harassed Manager Has 15 Helpers but Lacks an Office.

NEW YORK, July 11 (Spl.).—Gayety and excitement prevailed as amateur actors, torch singers and dancers gathered for an intensive six-week training course under the direction of the unit of dance, drama and music of the New York State Adult Education Program, recently.

Most of the students were 'teen age boys and girls; "the old-timers have been starved out of the business," explained Perce R. Benton, supervisor of the training course. He has worked 12 and 14 hours daily since taking over the unit last year. He has a staff of 15 teachers, four accompanists and no office.

"What I need," he said, "is sweeter personalities."

The course not only provides amateurs with basic training for the stage, but endeavors to rehabilitate unemployed troupers who are down on their luck. Fifteen ballet dancers of the Metropolitan Opera visit the studios regularly for stretching and limbering.

The 361 students taking the course hope to find employment in the fall, although only about ten per cent of them are fitted for a stage career. But Mr. Benton makes no attempt to discourage them at the start. The courses, he feels, provide "marvelous physical exercise," and students can always derive something from classes in diction, oral interpretation and phonetics.

Many of the students are high school youths who have their minds set on a stage career, and refuse to study.

Horse Show Program Is Set for Berryville

Berryville, July 11 (Spl.).—Thirty-five classes and twelve races have been carded for the two-day meet of the Berryville Horse Show, set for August 23 and 24, A. B. Hummer, secretary, announces.

Two classes introduced last year—the pair of hunters and the touch and out—were successful enough to warrant continuance. Four flat races and a steeplechase will be run each day.

Ross to Face McLarnin Sept. 6

Rosenbloom Is Told to Risk Crown Against Knight or Olin.

NEW YORK, July 11 (AP).—Jimmy McLarnin, the belting Celt, will get his chance September 6 to turn the tables on Barney Ross, the lightweight champion who made fight history this summer by winning Jimmy's welterweight crown by decision in 15 rounds in the Garden Bowl.

The return match was made today by promoters for the New York American Christmas fund and was immediately approved by the commission with the stipulation that Ross must agree to defend the lightweight title against Tony Canzoneri, former champion, within 60 days after the McLarnin bout. Ross agreed to this.

Site Not Yet Chosen.

Promoters of the return bout have not chosen a site yet. The match may be staged either at one of the local ball parks or in Madison Square Garden Bowl, where no champion has ever successfully defended his title. Incidentally, McLarnin has never failed to whip, in his second try, the few warriors who managed to beat him the first time.

Two other champions were notified that it was time for them to swing into action against recognized challengers, while another would-be title contender, Enzo Fiermonte, was as firmly told that he didn't belong in such swift company.

Fiermonte, youthful Italian husband of the former Mrs. John Jacob Astor, has been matched with Maxie Rosenbloom for a light-heavyweight title match this summer but the second refusal of the commission today to take him seriously apparently ended the matter.

Faces Knight or Olin.

Rosenbloom, deprived of his first big chance for contact with society, was ordered to choose between Georgia Joe Knight and Bob Olin of New York, and sign to meet either within 30 days.

Vince Bundee, middleweight champion, similarly was given 30 days in which to sign for a title defense against Teddy Yarosz, of Pittsburgh, recognized here as his outstanding challenger.

The winner of a match between Baby Arizmendi, Mexican champion, and Mike Belloise, of New York, at the Garden Bowl August 9, will be recognized by the commission as the New York State featherweight champion. Originally these two finalists of an elimination tournament were slated to fight for recognition as the successor to Kid Chocolate as world's featherweight title holder.

Chocolate resigned his title recently but now want it back.

Challenge to Cueists.

Cue players of Washington are issued a blanket challenge by Leon Yonders, of Baltimore, Maryland State pocket billiard champion, for matches to be played at the Lucky Strike Billiard Parlor, 528 Eighth street southeast, where Yonders is giving daily exhibitions. Yonders, also known as the Masked Marvel, plays from 4 to 8 o'clock, meeting all comers. Admission is free.

Giants Triumph As Terry and O'Doul Star

Pair's Hits Score All Runs as Pirates Are Nosed Out by 3-2 Count.

NEW YORK, July 12 (AP).—Manager Billy Terry and Lefty O'Doul combined their efforts at bat today to account for all the New York Giants' runs and help Hal Schumacher subdue the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 2, in the opening game of the four-game series.

O'Doul's right-field single scored Terry in the first inning and Memphis Bill parked the ball in the right-field stands for his fifth homer of the season and the Giants' second tally, evening the score after the Pirates' two-run first inning performance. O'Doul and his boss put on their act again in the fifth inning, Lefty driving the ball to the same spot and Terry crossing the plate with what turned out to be the deciding run.

Pirates Score in Opener.

Lloyd Waner's single and doubles by Brother Paul and Arky Vaughan gave the Pirates all their runs in the opening round. Schumacher blanked the Pirates after that and allowed only three hits in the last eight innings.

Benge Sets Down Reds As Dodgers Win, 5-2

Brooklyn, July 11 (AP).—Ray Benge, the silent spinner ball artist, pitched a steady ball game after a wobbly start in the first inning today and enabled the Brooklyn Dodgers to set down the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 2, in the opener of a four-game series.

Manager Casey Stengel of the Dodgers was chased from the field by Umpire Pfirman when Casey protested after Lonnie Frey was called out for failing to touch second base on the way back to first after Frederick's long fly was caught in the eighth inning.

The Reds got away to a two-run lead in the first inning when Pool's pop-fly double with two out chased two runners home. The Dodgers tied the score in the third inning and won in the fifth when Tony Cuccinello rapped a double to the left field wall after the Reds' pitcher, Si Johnson, had walked Frederick and Leslie.

Boston Braves Bow Twice To Cubs

Hartnett Batting Hero in Both Games; Scores Are 3 to 1 and 2 to 1.

BOSTON, July 11 (AP).—The second-place Chicago Cubs picked up a half game on the league-leading Giants today by taking both ends of a double-header from the Boston Braves. Guy Bush was hit freely while capturing the opener, 3 to 1, and in the second Pat Malone held the Tribesmen to three hits for a 2-to-1 victory.

"Gabby" Hartnett's bat was a powerful factor in both victories. He got two hits, including a two-bagger, in each game, and drove in 3 of the Cubs' 5 runs.

Flint Rhem opened for the Braves in the first and gave the Cubs all their hits, five in seven innings, which they bunched for their 3 tallies.

Unusual Play Helps Cubs.

Only 29 Tribesmen faced Malone in the second game. The Cubs clinched this game in unusual fashion in the fifth inning. Ed Brandt passed Babe Herman and, after Catcher Al Spohrer dropped the third strike on Cuyler, he threw to second, but was unable to beat Herman going down. Cuyler made first unopposed and Herman scored the winning run when Hartnett drove a long single to right field.

Dickey Slugs 2 Homers as Yanks Win

Six Errors Hurt Indians as League Leaders Cop Verdict, 9 to 4.

Murphy Holds Tribe to Seven Scattered Hits; Wins Eighth Game.

CLEVELAND, July 11 (AP).—Bill Dickey smashed two homers, each time with Ben Champman on base, to lead the New York Yankees to a 9-to-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians on their one-day stop here before opening a crucial series with Detroit tomorrow.

Johnny Murphy, the former Fordham University star, limited the Indians to seven well-scattered blows in winning his eighth game of the season.

Cleveland used three southpaws—Lloyd Brown, Bob Weiland and Thornton Lee. Together, they allowed but seven hits, but four errors by Second Baseman Hale and two by First Baseman Trosky kept them in trouble most of the time.

Phils Bat Timely, Rout Cards, 5 to 2

Philadelphia, July 11 (AP).—Eight-hit hurling by Phil Collins, coupled with timely batting by his mates off the delivery of Tex Carleton, gave the Phillies a 5-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the current series opener today.

Collins was not scored on until the ninth, when Pinch-Hitter Delancey hit a homer with Virgil Davis on base. It was the Phils' fourth straight win.

The Phils scored twice in the first on doubles by Bartell and Chiozza, an error and a wild pitch. They counted again in the fourth on a pass, a sacrifice and Manager Jimmy Wilson's single. The final two tallies came in the sixth on singles by Bartell and Chiozza, aided by an error and Allen's long fly.

Manager Frankie Frisch, suffering a Charlie-horse in each leg, did not get in the game until he came up as a pinch-hitter in the ninth.

Rube Hayman Totes Ice.

Rube Hayman, 180-pound tackle, who made the all-high school football team last year, is pulling a who plans to matriculate at the "Red Grange" these days. Hayman, University of Richmond in September, is a full-fledged iceman. The former Central High athlete says the ice-toting business is just the thing to keep him in condition for the coming gridiron season.

Charlottesville Wins, 11-3, as Titcomb Stars

Charlottesville, Va., July 11 (Spl.). Titcomb, Alexandria High School twirler, held Woodstock hitless up to the seventh inning and Charlottesville won today's game with ease, 11 to 3.

The locals collected 14 hits off Brewbaker, on the mound for the Valley team. Cropp, of Fork Union Military Academy, led with the stick, while Capt. Beale, Fitzhugh and Taylor contributed timely doubles.

Flying Sailor Second by A Neck

Fans Thrilled as Dead Heat Signal Accidentally Flashes.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., July 11 (AP).—By staging a driving finish in the home-stretch, Paul F. Ratti's Black Hand, who closed at 17-1, scored a stunning upset today in the $2500 Harvard Handicap Stake, a 5½ furlong sprint, in today's racing at Rockingham.

C. V. Whitney's Trumpery went to the starting stalls as the favorite and was fortunate in finishing third in the four-horse event. Black Hand crossed the finish line with a nose on Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Flying Sailor, which led Trumpery by a neck.

The early pace was set by A. Bartelstein's Chinese Empress, which held it until she turned into the stretch. The dead heat signal accidentally flashed on when Black-Hand and Flying Sailor crossed the line but a speedy correction was made and Black Hand's supporters were rewarded with $35.60 for every $2 ticket.

Bright Haven Wins at Empire.

Empire City Race Track, July 11 (AP).—The Sage Stable's Bright Haven, which recently beat a smart field at long odds, came right back with another meritorious effort to account for the Mahopac Handicap, spring feature of the card here today. The race, for 3-year-olds exclusively, had only three starters after the early withdrawal of Sergt. Byrne. Miss Merriment, representing the Dorwood Stable, returned to competition after a rest since early in June and finished second, two lengths back, while the Maemere Farm's Flint Shot, absent from the races since last winter in Florida, lost the place by three parts of a length.

Miss Merriment was favorite at 9 to 10, but Bright Haven was well backed, paying 8 to 5. The time for the abbreviated 6 furlongs was 1:09 1-5.

Marooned Detroit Victor.

Detroit, July 11 (AP).—Leo J. Marks' 4-year-old bay gelding, Marooned, captured the $1,200 Troy Handicap, feature event of the Michigan State Fair Grounds card today, winning by a head from Sabula, which was one and a quarter lengths ahead of Blue Emperor.

Second away, Marooned got onto the lead at the quarter and was never headed for the remainder of the 6-furlong course. He covered it in 1:12 2-5, and paid $11.40 for a $2 ticket.

Form players had rough going again in most of today's races.

Arlington Disqualification.

Arlington Park, Ill., July 11 (AP). Hal Price Headley's Fraidy Cat benefited by the first disqualification of the Arlington Park meeting today to win the $1,000 Kenilworth purse, moving up to first place when the judges ordered down the number of T. C. Worden's Prince Splendor.

Alfred Robertson, astride Fraidy Cat, made his bid rounding the stretch turn, but found his mount in close quarters and had to drop back. Prince Splendor finished two lengths to the good. Robertson, however, claimed Prince Splendor, ridden by L. Haas, had bumped his mount.

The claim was allowed and Fraidy Cat was moved up. Countess Bina, running with Leonard Wilson as the Running W. Ranch entry, moved up to second place, with E. D. Shaffer's St. Bernard third. An outsider in the wagering, Fraidy Cat paid $11.52 straight.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNLAWFUL, $7.40, $4.30, $2.90; GRANDPA'S BOY, $6, $3.80; GREAT MASTER, $3.10.

UNLAWFUL, prominently placed from the start, wore down CANOBIE LAKE and opening up a good lead had to be ridden out sharply at the end to hold GRANDPA'S BOY safe. The latter, outrun for the first three furlongs, closed with a rush through the stretch and was overtaking the winner rapidly at the end. GREAT MASTER worked his way up steadily and was going strongly at the finish. LEALETTE closed a big gap in the last quarter mile. TIPPO TIP was going stoutly at the finish. JAY D had early speed. CANOBIE LAKE stopped badly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:12. Off at 3:18. Winner, Merryland Farm's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RHODIUS, $12.80, $5.70, $3.70; LAMP BLACK, $4.90, $3.40; VACILLATE, $3.30.

RHODIUS, restrained early while in pursuit of the pace, came to the outside of the leaders reach the stretch and, closing with a rush, was up in last few strides. LAMP BLACK, well up early, dropped back and came again through the stretch. VACILLATE drew into a good lead after leaving the back stretch, but weakened in the last 20 yards. PARTIES, slow to begin, closed a big gap. YANCEY saved ground in the stretch and held on well. ORAL had early speed, but stopped badly in the last furlong. LEFLORE was never prominent. MIXED PARTIES fell while at the post and the field was dispatched without her. All wagers stand.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:47. Off at 3:50. Winner, Mrs. A. R. Smith's ch. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFORMAL, $17.40, $7.30, $4.90; KHAMSEEN, $5.90, $5; WISE COUNT, $4.30.

INFORMAL moved to the front in the opening three sixteenths, drew clear, bore out in the stretch and drew clear again when straightened away in the final furlong. KHAMSEEN attended the winner closest throughout and held on well in determined fashion. WISE COUNT, shuffled back at the start, moved up on the outside and held on willingly through the stretch drive. HASTY PETER, unable to keep pace early, made up some ground. STRENUOUS weakened through the last furlong. CORRYMEELA was never prominent. LUCK IN tired.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. The Lawrence Telegram Purse. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:22. Winner Merryland Farm's ch. f (2), by Purchase —Sparkle Star. Trained by H. E. Brown. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46 4-5, 1:06 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR CHASE, $13.50, $4.10, $2.80; SUN ANTIOCH, $3, $2.50; BANK HOLIDAY, $2.90.

STAR CHASE, away forwardly and under slight reserve while establishing the pace, held on stubbornly in the final drive and outlasted to hold SUN ANTIOCH safe. The latter, slow to begin, was sent up on the outside, closed willingly in the stretch and just failed to be up in time. BANK HOLIDAY forced the early pace and held on well through the stretch. JOBAKHETA saved ground in the stretch and made some ground. TOOL BOX was never a factor. HIGH IMAGE and MIGRATE bothered faltered after a fair display of early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. The Harvard Handicap. Purse, $2,500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51½. Off at 4:52. Winner, P. F. Ratti's br. c. (3), by Flying Ebony—Manicurist. Trained by P. J. Matthews. Value to winner, $1,920; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:05.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK HAND, $35.60, $19.00, $5.30; FLYING SAILOR, $5.40, 12.90; TRUMPERY, $2.70.

BLACK HAND, well placed from the start and under slight restraint while following the pace, came to the outside of the leaders and, closing with a rush, took command right at the end. FLYING SAILOR, permitted to settle into his best stride, moved up on the outside, closed with a rush that just missed. TRUMPERY followed the pace of CHINESE EMPRESS, but began bearing in in the stretch. CHINESE EMPRESS had good speed and, under pressure, was unable to stave off the closing challenge of the leaders. SLAPDASH was unable to reach the leaders. GOLD STEP tired. OLD BALDY was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. The Windham Handicap. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:22½. Off at 5:23½. Winner, A. Bartelstein's b. g. (4), by Terry—Alice Harris. Trained by H. Unna. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 2-5, 1:12 1-5, 1:37 3-5 (new track record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERALICE, $8.70, $4.40, $2.90; ROUSTABOUT, $4.90, $3.00; SARADA, $2.40.

TERALICE, reserved for the first half-mile within striking distance of the pace, saved ground in the stretch and, taking command when UNIVERSE began tiring, drew out steadily under pressure through the closing furlong. ROUSTABOUT, in close quarters at the first turn, was taken back of the pace, moved up in the last three furlongs, and finished second with good energy. SARADA, forced to lose ground leaving the back stretch while improving his position, was on the outside of the leaders rounding into the stretch, and was unable to keep pace in the final furlong. UNIVERSE put out a fast pace, but faltered in the closing quarter-mile. STARFIRE forced the early pace for the first half-mile, then rettired.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:51½. Off at 5:54. Winner, A. A. Baroni's ch. g. (7), by Gnome—Calistoga. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALOME, $12.10, $4.40, $2.80; BROWN WISDOM, $3.60, $2.50; BABOO, $2.60.

CALOME moved up with a rush after going the first half-mile, wore down BROWN WISDOM after reaching the stretch, and drew out to win with speed in reserve. BROWN WISDOM had good speed and continued well to end, though no match for the winner in closing strides. BABOO went prominently placed from the start and had no excuses. PLUMAGE, unable to reach the leaders, held on well through the stretch. CALGARY KAY was unable to enter into contention. The others were outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:24. Off at once. Winner, A. Papa's b. f. (4), by Prince of Bourbon—Mercia. Trained by D. P. Veneziano. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 2-5, 1:46 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDACORN, $5.90, $3.70, $2.80; GALLIC, $5.00, $3.70; LAURETTA NASH, $3.10.

KINDACORN found clear sailing on the inside when making his effort leaving the back stretch, took a good lead in the stretch, but had to be hard ridden at the end to stave off GALLIC. The latter drew into a good lead while under steadying restraint, bore out badly, but came again out in the center of the track, and just failed to be up in time. LAURETTA NASH, carried wide at the stretch turn when GALLIC bore out, closed with good energy. PRINCE TOKALON, hard ridden, never could seriously threaten the leaders. KIBITZER faltered in the last quarter-mile.

Western Maryland Net Play August 13-18

Mountain Lake Park, July 11 (Spl.).—Plans are being formulated for the staging of the fifteenth Western Maryland Championship Tennis Tournament here August 13 to 18 under the auspices of the Woman's Civic Club. The event is sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association and usually attracts the outstanding men and women players of the Middle Atlantic States.

Mrs. Margaret Carspecken Robinson gained permanent possession of the women's singles trophy by winning it for the third time last year and the sponsors of the tourney have decided to offer a silver pitcher as the prize in women's singles competition this year. Frank Broida, of Pittsburgh, won a leg on the men's cup by capturing singles honors in 1933.

The Allegheny Mountains Tennis event, Cumberland's open tournament, will be held this year over two week-ends, August 4 and 5, and August 11 and 12, enabling players from nearby towns to play in the tournament without spending so much time from home.

Chisox Pitcher Married.

Waverly, Iowa, July 11 (AP).—Leslie Tietje, of Sumner, Iowa, youthful pitcher with the Chicago White Sox, was married yesterday to Miss Bonnie Miller, of Waverly, it was announced today.

The couple left for Chicago, where the White Sox open a series with Philadelphia tomorrow.

U. S. L. T. A. Chief Voices Confidence Davis Cup Will Be Returned to America

Hall Declares Team Has Balance

Points Out Dependence of England, Australia on Single Man.

Net Body, Head to Guard Against Friction Among American Squad.

NEW YORK, July 11 (U.P.).—After the most stinging rout American athletic expeditionary forces have suffered in foreign fields over the past 10 years—the British open, Henley and Wimbledon—efforts were under way tonight to bring every weapon into play behind United States Davis Cup forces.

While America is given less chance on foreign ratings to recapture the cup than in almost any year since America lost it to France in 1927, Walter Merrill Hall, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, prepared to leave for Europe Saturday, confident that the cup will be returned.

Announcement that Hall is leaving for England, accompanied by Dwight Davis, donor of the cup, following close on the heels of Wilmer Allison's departure last week to join the American squad, recalls that on at least two occasions internal friction robbed America of its chance to win back the trophy.

Vines' Plaint Recalled.

In 1929 Bill Tilden actually resigned from the cup squad, but later rejoined it. Following last year's unsuccessful efforts, Ellsworth Vines, America's tennis ace, indicated that management of the squad was not satisfactory. On two other occasions players have returned with reports of bickering within the American forces.

Hall believe America has better than an even chance to win back the cup in spite of the worst rout at Wimbledon in years, nad the brisk chief of American tennis affairs intends to leave no stone in the way of its recovery.

"Perry is the only English player who has beaten our singles players abroad," Hall pointed out. "Crawford is the only Australian. Both matches against Frank Shields and Sidney Wood were won by the closest of margins. Even granting that Perry and Crawford are invincible—which we do not grant—Austin and McGrath are not. Nor are their doubles players likely winners.

No One-Man Team.

"America has a better chance than either Australia or England, because their strength is concentrated in one man in each case. Give Crawford two victories in singles; we still ought to get two over the other singles player—McGrath or Quist—and the doubles victory would win. The same applies to Perry in the challenge round."

Five tennis observers question the logic of Hall's argument. America's hopes rose sharply after Wimbledon, in spite of our failure to win anything more than the doubles title. While Hall is going to Europe ostensibly to cement relations with the International Federation at its meeting July 30, there is no question but that the busy tennis chief wants to be on the ground to see that nothing goes wrong with the squad.

Imes' .432 Bat Mark Tops Celanese Hitters

Cumberland, Md., July 11 (Spl.). Charles "Chick" Imes led the batsmen of the Celanese Spinners, runners-up to the Ellerslie Cardinals, first-half champions of the Potomac Valley League, with an average of .432 for 19 games, according to statistics compiled by the official scorer.

Manager Sammy De Luca was second with a percentage of .411 and Athey and Fred Dabosky were third and fourth, respectively, with marks of .386 and .384. Kabosky hit safely in 16 consecutive games.

Norris had the best record among the pitchers with eight wins and one defeat. His eight triumphs were scored in consecutive order.

Latest batting averages of the Inter-State League show Sam Rainey, who does the catching for Potomac Edison, to be leading the circuit with an average of .426 in 54 trips to the plate. During the past week-end, Rainey rapped out five hits in seven trips to the plate and boosted his percentage 43 points.

Winchester Road Nine; Schedule Rearranged

Frederick, Md., July 11 (Spl.).—With Winchester, Va., playing as a road team, the second half of the Blue Ridge League schedule was revised yesterday by President Frank M. Colley. The Winchester team was granted permission to play all its games away from home because of poor attendance.

Frederick won the first half pennant. Besides Frederick and Winchester the other teams of the league are Hagerstown, Martinsburg and Chambersburg.

The revised schedule:

July 14—Winchester at Chambersburg (two games); 15, Frederick at Martinsburg; 21, Winchester at Hagerstown (two games), Martinsburg at Chambersburg; 22, Martinsburg at Frederick; 28, Hagerstown at Chambersburg; 29, Chambersburg at Frederick, Winchester at Frederick.

August 4—Winchester at Martinsburg (two games), Chambersburg at Hagerstown; 5, Hagerstown at Frederick; 11, Winchester at Hagerstown, Frederick at Chambersburg; 12, Hagerstown at Martinsburg, Chambersburg at Frederick; 18, Martinsburg at Chambersburg; 19, Winchester at Frederick (two games), Chambersburg at Martinsburg; 25, Winchester at Chambersburg (two games), Frederick at Hagerstown; 26, Hagerstown at Martinsburg.

September 1—Chambersburg at Hagerstown, Hagerstown at Frederick; 2, Chambersburg at Martinsburg, Hagerstown at Frederick; 3, Winchester at Frederick (two games), Hagerstown at Chambersburg (morning), Hagerstown at Martinsburg (afternoon).

One of the most perplexing problems of early aerial warfare was that of using the machine gun in the airplane. It was impossible in the older types to fire bullets through the propeller area where gunfire was often most needed. The trouble was, of course, that no way had been perfected to keep the bullets from striking the propeller blades.

One of the unsatisfactory methods devised was to mount the guns on the upper wing, where they would shoot above the propeller. Another aviator attached wedge-shaped pieces of metal on the propeller blades in line with the gun. When, as often happened, a bullet struck one of the blades, it would be deflected by the metal wedge. This, too, was unsatisfactory because of the danger of deflected bullets and because of the added strain to the propeller.

What was needed was a machine gun that would fire between the blades without any danger of hitting them. The problem was turned over to Anthony H. G. Fokker, civilian employe in the German air corps. Up to that time Fokker knew nothing of machine guns. He had never even handled one.

He conceived the idea of operating the gun from the motor itself, timing the fire so that the gun would shoot only when the blades were clear of the muzzle. Within 48 hours he worked out the idea, built and demonstrated successfully the first synchronized machine gun used in the war.

Radio Waves and Ripples

"EIGHT-FINGERED bugaboos and fang-toothed jinxes are hurrying to a Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago to cast their spells on 13 old-time race drivers as they drive 13 ancient automobiles at speeds as high as 13 miles an hour in the 'Jinx Race' at the World's Fair on Friday, the 13th. The rout—or the triumph, of the jinxes, will come to radio listeners in a description of the 'speed' event at 3:15 p. m. EDST (2:15 p. m. Washington time), over an N. B. C.-WJZ network.

"Such famous racing drivers as Barney Oldfield, Cliff Woodbury, Harry W. Cooper, Andy Burt and Art Gardiner will drive the ancient vehicles at top speed around a 1,300-foot track at the exposition. Among the cars that will demonstrate the stamina of their two-cylinder motors are an 1896 Tallyho and a 'rope drive' Holsman, together with a Stanley Steamer, but the betting is heavy on a late model Maxwell, which left the factory in 1904.—N. B. C. press release."

We don't know when it was that we gave up ambitions to present the world with another Barney Oldfield. Probably it was about the same time that a constitutional discordancy of eye, muscle and brain slowly worked into our consciousness the awful truth about our chances of making the same world forget its Babe Ruths, its Walter Hagens.

We don't know when this happened, and we sometimes doubt we ever ceased to encourage .150 batting and boomerang-like hooking with hopes for a sudden, magical flowering of athletic coordination. But we do recall an earlier period when there was no compulsion for discouraging comparisons; when given a baseball and a glove, we were, indeed, Babe Ruth; when a battered brassie made us Hagen.

We were Barney Oldfield in those days, too. We needed only to skid "Bug 13" in the dirt of Swan Lane, which was really an alley, to know that. "Bug 13" was the speediest, the sturdiest, the neatest little racer you ever laid eyes on. A 6x2 plank was its chassis, a piece of clothes-line its steering "wheel." But the hood. You should have seen the hood. No inverted soap box for us. We hooded the Bug with lath, more or less symmetrically, and painted her name on each side in green and red.

There was a car, Mr. Oldfield.

COLUMBIA today begins the processes that by next fall will find perhaps some now unknown talent riding the airways to fame and glory as leading lady to and chief compatriot of Dick Powell, dapper singing man of film and radio, in a soup-sponsored programs series, "Hollywood Hotel."

The judges, the men and women charged with finding Washington's entry for the regional auditions and, Heaven willing, the finals to follow, were picked yesterday. In addition to the city's radio editors, already nominated, they will be Martin Codel, radio trade magazine editor; Guy Wonders, executive manager of Warner Brothers theaters in Washington, and Bessie Caswell.

The auditions begin at 10 a. m., if any of you have forgotten. Step right up. Lines form on all sides.

Arch broadcast his daily sports program from New York Tuesday following that baseball encounter of the National and American Leagues' best. He had the assistance of Ted Husing, France Laux and Paul Douglas. The boys just came along with Arch for the fun of it . . . we wanted to say novelty . . . Ted and France talking of the game, Paul handling the commercial announcements. Probably no Washington radioer ever had so much guest-artist help. No one, at least, ever broadcast for a sponsor with Husing.

Arch McDonald, WJSV's baseball specialist, has set something of a guest-artist record.

Noted Brother-Sister Duos of Links Invited to Meet in Match.

By Dave Herman.

THE Harpers, of Virginia, and the Dettweilers, of Washington, the most famous brother-sister golf combinations of the two districts despite their youth, will meet in a match on Washington links if present plans of Roland Mackenzie, Congressional Club pro, materialize.

Six State golf titles are boasted by the youthful quartet—the Virginia men's and women's amateur crowns, the District boys boys and girls junior titles, and the Maryland State boys, and women's championship.

Chandler, 20 years old, born and bred in Portsmouth, Va., won his third Old Dominion amateur title at the Princess Anne course, Virginia Beach. His medal score set a new course record. On a nearby course, Cavalier, about a long spoon and mashie shot from Princess Anne, 17-year-old Lily also was cracking the feminine links record. Lily, who doesn't weigh more than 100 pounds soaken wet, waded through her field with the same comparative ease that her tall, black-haired brother did. Unfortunately, Lily, tied for the medal, lost in a stirring playoff. But the championship was what she wanted.

Billy Starred at 14.

Billy Dettweiler is 16 years old. Raw-boned and angular, he, too, has made meteoric rises in golf. At the age of 14 he qualified for the National Amateur, being the youngest participant in the event at Five Farms. His 78 of the first day's medal round equaled that of Francis Ouimet. Billy also is the District junior champion, and recently shot a brilliant 70 at Manor to capture the Maryland junior title.

Sister Helen, jut turned 19, has been playing golf but a few years, but in that time she has not let any grass grow beneath her feet. She has today a 5 handicap. This is remarkable considering the short time she has been playing. Runner-up for the District last year, Helen won the Maryland State championship last month at Elkridge, and a few weeks ago the District girls junior at Congressional, setting a new course record on her last round.

The Dettweilers are considered the finest prospects in the District. Helen, almost as tall as her 6-foot brother, has been using men's sticks, and whacks the ball for tremendous distances, sometimes rivaling the powerful tee shots propelled by Billy. It is nothing for her to play Congressional in the low 80's, and it is nothing for Billy to play the same course in the low 70's.

ave Same Ambitions.

These two young men and two young women have the same ambiambitions. Lily and Helen want to win the Middle Atlantic championship scheduled at Washington Golf and Country Club in October. Lily was runner-up to Mrs. Jean Jones in the event last year. Helen did not compete. Lily and Helen will compete in the National women's championship at Chestnut Hill, Pa., also in October, and hope to prove a couple of surprise packages.

Chandler, having won the Virginia Open, a feat no other amateur has ever accomplished, wants to add the Middle Atlantic to his valuable collections. The Middle Atlantic is cheduled July 26-28 at Hot Springs, Va., and Billy Dettweiler also will be a contestant. Both will be down at Five Farms, Baltimore, August 21 for the sectional qualifying trials for the National amateur. Harper has competed in the big event for the past three years, and for the past two has been medalist in the trials in Washington. In 1931, at Beverly Country Club, Chicago, he lost in the second round to George T. Dunlap, present amateur champion. The amateur this year will be all match play, and thus Harper and Dettweiler will have a grand chance.

But about the match—it may come off definitely a few days before August 21. Chaldner will be on his way to Five Farms, and he likes to drag his kid sister along for the fun of it.

Gallico Just Remembers Harder Was in Star Game

Discovers Cleveland Pitcher Did Almost as Well as Carl Hubbell; Hears Magnates Are Not Enthusiastic About Continuing Game.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, July 11 (Spl.).—This department owes some kind of apology to a party by the name of Mel Harder, who throws curve balls right-handed for the Cleveland Indians, an American League team. In Tuesday's salute to Master Carl Hubbell, I sort of unstrung my fiddle and laid it away after having serenaded Carl lustily for his grand performance against the American League sluggers.

I think I should have kept it set up a little longer and played a tender and worshipful little melody in praise of Mr. Harder, who was sent into the great circus ball game in the fifth inning with two National Leaguers on base and none out and two runs over the plate. Perhaps I was too overcome by the sweetness of my own music to realize that Harder stayed in there, throwing his sweet and easy curve for five full innings, and gave the great National League batters just one hit in all that time. Somehow it didn't look as showy or exciting as Hubbell's performance, but it must have been. It looks much better on paper.

Quite a Performance.

Looking through the detailed account of the game, I find that Harder faced the following National League sluggers: Mel Ott, Paul Waner, Art Vaughan, Al Lopez, Frank Frisch, Pie Traynor, Chuck Klein, Bill Terry and W. Herman. To some of them he pitched twice. And only W. Herman was able to hit him safely. The rest of the boys popped, grounded, fanned and forced. Also Master Harder gave but one base on balls in five innings. There is a considerable pitching record.

I wonder what a genius like that is doing in Cleveland? I should think he would be able to get a job with Detroit or New York, or some team that is very much in need of a young man who can throw baseballs like that. I inquired about this and discovered that Detroit would very much like to engage him, but Cleveland will not sell him because Cleveland can annoy Detroit with this same Harder every series they play, and there is nothing Cleveland enjoys more than annoying Detroit.

Magnates Queer Birds.

I already have heard loose talk to the effect that the magnates do not like the game and have not yet done anything about arranging it for next year, and would like to abandon it if they could. I was afraid that this would happen as soon as I saw the deliriously happy crowd of 48,000 that jammed the Polo Grounds and heard that 15,000 had been turned away from the gates because there was no more room inside the yard.

My experience with baseball magnates in general is that they distrust anything that the patrons of baseball like very much, and do not like to give it to them in too large quantities. The baseball magnates once inadvertently ran a baseball field day in connection with some game or other in which various stars ran the bases and threw and batted for distance and so on, and the spectators came in such numbers to see it and enjoyed the goings on so tremendously that the magnates never ran another one.

Tuesday's all-star game was as screwy an encounter as you will ever see, and one of the most entertaining games I have ever witnessed.

Something Doing All the Time.

It was pure fun and enjoyment from start to finish. Something was happening every minute. Some famous player was always at bat or doing something exciting in the field, either making a miraculous play or a silly error. Of course, one reason why the magnates are not particularly enamored of the game is that it draws between $50,000 and $60,000 which they do not get, but which is turned over to a relief fund for indigent ball players.

It becomes a sort of a fixation with anyone who has ever promoted anything and it hurts them like hell to see a large crowd congregating anywhere and collecting dough for it. I forget who it was remarked when Rickard was lying in state in Madison Square Garden that it was a good thing poor Tex didn't know what was going on and that thousands of people were piling into Madison Square Garden for nothing all day long.

Uniontown Pro Golf Event Won by Parks

Uniontown, Pa., July 11 (Spl.).—Joe Fungy, professional of the Cumberland Country Club placed fifteenth in the golf tournament on the Summit Hotel course, near Uniontown, with a score of 161? Sam Parks, South Hill section, Pittsburgh, won the event with a card of 141. Vincent Eldred, of the Highland Club, was second with 146. Jack Thompson, Youngstown; Ted Luther, Valley Heights, and Horace Brand, Clarksburg, were tied for third with a 152.

Parks is a former pro on the local course. Dave McKay, Field Club, broke the course record on the first nine with a 31. Parks shot a 68 in his last round, just one more than the course record.

Baltimore Nine Victor Over Marines

Simmons Fans 9 Men as Marines Bow, 8-5; Play Hecht Next.

QUANTICO, Va., July 11.—The brilliant pitching of Bill Simmons of the visiting Manhatten A. C., of Baltimore, proved too much for the Quantico Marines here at Post Field this afternoon and they bowed, 8 to 5. Bill whiffed nine of the Leathernecks and pulled out of a critical situation in the ninth when he tossed in a third strike to Capt. Charlie Gann, ending the game. Dick Dixon, new centerfielder of the Marines, was the only man in the Leatherneck batting order who seemed to be able to measure Simmons' slants and even he failed in the ninth by tapping an easy grounder to the box.

The Marines play the Hecht Co. Department Store League team of Washington at Post Field on Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock.

Walt Mason, Himself

Frank James.

When he had quit his ruthless games, I talked one day with old Frank James. He and his gifted brother, Jess, had caused the railways much distress; accused them right and left, and Jess was butchered in St. Joe—a traitor comrade laid him low. Then Frank surrendered and was tried for chicken stealing, homicide, and for disturbance of the peace, and for resisting the police. He was acquitted with a whoop and settled in a humble coop, to raise asparagus and kraut, and be a law-abiding scout. 'I interviewed him on a day when he had sold his season's hay. He seemed an elder of the kirk, engaged in good and godly work; he wore a black jim-swinger coat, a preacher's string-tie at his throat; his hair had not for months been sheared, he had a non-conformist beard, his hat was of the stovepipe brand, he had a hymnbook in his hand. I had expected to behold an arrant bully, loud and bold, an arrogant and boastful chap, who would be lusting for a scrap. But Frank was like a little child, so kind and trusting, meek and mild; the gist of all he had to say was that old truth, "Crime doesn't pay."

Stocks Drift Slightly Higher In Slow Sales

New York, July 11 (AP).—The stock market continued to jog along at a leisurely pace today, while grain quotations sprinted 3 to 5 cents a bushel, the daily allowable limits, and cotton futures sold at the highest prices recorded in about four years.

The rush to buy the leading commodities, touched off by Government estimates of the lowest yields and acreages in decades, left stock market traders cool.

They could find little bullish argument to buy stocks in a rise in grain and cotton motivated chiefly by small crops rather than expanding consumption.

Market Drifts.

After early strength, as an advance carried over from the preceding session, the market reverted to a slow drift while maintaining an undertone of firmness.

Small gains outnumbered losses at the close, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks moved up four-tenths of a point to 79.4.

Volume on the stock exchange was about the same as yesterday at 648,540 shares.

Alcohol shares encountered selling on the Mississippi dry vote and extension of the time limit on unrestricted importation of foreign liquor. National Distillers fell to a new 1934 low at 21⅜ and finished off 1½ points. Schenley and American Commercial Alcohol lost more than a point.

A few specialties were in demand. National Lead, usually an inactive issue, took a prominent place on the ticker tape as it climbed to a new 1934 peak at 162 and finished up 6½ points. A rise of three points in Brooklyn-Manhattan-Transit to the highest price touched this year attracted buying to other New York City traction issues. Silver shares spurted toward the close, carrying U. S. Smelting more than 2 points higher and Howe Sound up a point.

Mail Orders Feeble.

Mail order and other merchandise shares made only a feeble response to the improvement in commodity prices. The usual leaders of the market, such as U. S. Steel, General Motors and Chrysler, moved narrowly in quiet trading. American Can pushed across 100, ending fractionally higher. Utility shares continued to drag heavily.

Speculative activity centered in the commodity markets and little attention was paid to the mixed trade news. Investment buyers had the stock market almost to themselves.

The Iron Age estimated steel operations had recovered to 27 per cent of capacity, a rebound of 6 points from a week ago. It saw indications of another month of relatively high automobile output. Electric Power output last week, reflecting curtailment in industrial operations and the July Fourth holiday, retained a lead of only 1.1 per cent over 1933, compared with 2 per cent the preceding week.

A sharp decline in carloadings for last week was indicated by reports of individual carriers.

Figures on New Deal Cost of Both Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Lippmann Are Open to Question; Blank Checks Can Not Be Totaled.

By Ralph West Robey.

In speaking at Jackson, Mich., a few days ago, Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said that the New Deal to date has cost $7,000,000,000, and that $20,000,000,000 more has been authorized. Walter Lippmann, in one of his syndicated pieces, takes sharp issue with these figures. He says that the cost to date has been only $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 and that something less than $6,000,000,000 more has been authorized. Such a difference of opinion, it seems to me, is worthy of attention.

First, as to the $7,000,000,000 that Mr. Fletcher says has been the cost of the New Deal to date: Mr. Lippmann says that Mr. Fletcher obtains such a figure simply by taking the total expenditures of the Federal Government for the fiscal year just ended. This is objected to because of the $7,000,000,000 spent $2,500,000,000 was used for meeting the ordinary expenses of the Government. "To charge up these expenditures to the New Deal," says Mr. Lippmann, "is absurd."

Is No Reason to Believe Mr. Fletcher Did This.

There is, however, no basis for assuming that Mr. Fletcher got his seven billion dollar figure in this manner. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that it was obtained by considering merely the expenditures devoted, as some one has said, "to relief, reconstruction and revolution" since March 4, 1933.

The direct outlays for these purposes have totaled just under $4,800,000,000. The large items involved are: Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $2,087,000,000; Public Works Administration, $1,044,000,000; Civil Works Administration and Federal Emergency Relief Administration, $657,000,000; Agricultural Adjustment Administration and Farm Credit Administration, $442,000,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, $332,000,000, and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, $150,000,000.

In addition to these direct outlays, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation swapped a billion dollars of governmentally guaranteed obligations for private mortgages, the Farm Land Banks did the same thing to the extent of, say, some $800,000,000 to $900,000,000, and the RFC traded a few hundred millions of its governmentally guaranteed debentures for preferred stock of commercial banks.

These Would Account for Mr. Fletcher's Figure.

When these two groups of items are added together we get approximately $7,000,000,000. It seems to me it is likely that this, rather than the total expenditures of last year, is the source of Mr. Fletcher's figure.

At the same time this does not justify using the amount as the "cost" of the New Deal. It is the total spent, both directly and indirectly, by the Government. It includes both the actual outlays and the contingent liabilities. In using the figure, accuracy demands that this fact be mentioned. Accuracy also demands, as Mr. Lippmann insists, that it be pointed out that a substantial amount will be recovered in due time.

As to how much has been authorized for the future, all calculations are virtually worthless. As summarized by Moody's Investors Service, the actual emergency appropriations by the last session of Congress were $4,500,000,000. In addition to this the borrowing power of the RFC was increased $1,500,000,000, the obligations of the Farm Credit Administration were guaranteed by the Government both as to principal and interest to the extent of $2,000,000,000 and those of the Home Owners Loan Corporation to the extent of $3,000,000,000, and the Treasury was given a stabilization fund of $2,000,000,000.

When one goes beyond these and a few miscellaneous items, however, addition becomes impossible. Then one gets into authorizations that have no limit. There are, I believe, three of these on the books—one in the AAA, one in the RFC and one in the new housing bill. In view of this, I can not see how one can get a figure of either $20,000,000,000 or $6,000,000,000. Blank checks on the Treasury simply can not be totaled.

Curb Turns Irregular in Mixed Trading

Gains Outnumber Declines; Sales Volume Drops to 132,000 Shares.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Light selling following an early advance gave final prices a slightly irregular tinge on the curb exchange today. Gains outnumbered declines, however. Trading, which started moderately active, turned dull on the selling.

Alcohols were a bit easy in sympathy with weakness of that group on the big board. Utilities and metals were steady. Oils improved in spots.

Fajardo sugar rose 7 points in a small turnover. Commonwealth Edison, Parker Rust Proof, Humble Oil and Dow Chemical finished up a point or so. Glen Alden Coal, American Cyanamid B and Phillip Morris (new) scored fractional gains in active dealings. Electric Bond & Share, Standard Oil of Indiana, Lake Shore and Swift & Co. ended virtually unchanged.

Sherwin Williams yielded a point under profit-taking, while smaller setbacks occurred in Greyhound Corporation, Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Canadian Industrial Alcohol A.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Rates for the dollar abroad moved within a limited range today.

In London the American currency closed at 5.04 to the pound, a net loss of ⅜ of a cent, while sterling sold at $5.04 in New York, a decline of ⅛ of a cent from Tuesday's final price.

Bar gold in London declined 1½ pence to 137 shillings 11 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $34.76. An amount valued at $735,292 was sold.

The dollar declined slightly in pars to the equivalent of 6.59⅞ cents to the franc, and the franc dipped 0.00⅛ of a cent in New York to the same figure.

Clearances of Wheat Decrease During Week

Ottawa, July 11 (AP).—A decrease of 1,514,600 bushels in export clearances of wheat for the week ending July 6 as compared with the previous week was noted in figures issued today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Last week export clearances totaled 1,899,754 bushels as against 3,414,354 for the preceding week.

Bond Market Rises Fraction; Peaks Reached

Government Loans Steady; Sales Volume Totals $12,540,000.

New York, July 11 (AP).—The steady demand for U. S. Government securities and prime corporation issues was reflected by many new high records in today's bond market.

The trading volume was about the same as in the previous session, transfers totaling $12,540,000, par value.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans moved up another two-tenths of a point to 87, where it was only 1.1 points under its best 1934 levels.

Little Need to Reports.

The loans market apparently paid little attention to the Government's pessimistic crop report or to trade and industrial developments generally.

All listed Treasury bonds advanced into new peak territory for the past year or longer, although the turnover in this department of about $3,440,000 was not exceptionally large. The majority of the gains ranged from 2-32ds to 15-32ds of a point. Federal Farm Mortgage and Home Owners Loan Obligations participated in the forward movement.

Among bonds registering their highest prices for several years, or since their issuance, were some of American Telephone, Armstrong Cork, Santa Fe, Brooklyn Union Gas, Burlington, Delaware & Hudson, Detroit Edison, Gannett Co., Goodyear, Hocking Valley, Interborough Rapid Transit, Liggett & Myers, National Dairy, Norfolk & Western, Northern States Power, Otis Steel, Pennsylvania Power, Pennsylvania Railroad, Phillips Petroleum, Remington Rand, Tennessee Electric, Union Pacific and Wheeling & Lake Erie.

Moderate Losses Recorded.

There were a number of moderate losses recorded, but improvement was shown by issues of Alleghany Corporation, Armour & Co., Central Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Consolidated Coal, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, International Telephone, Lehigh Valley, N. Y. Central, North American, North American Edison, Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific and Warner Bros.

Further reactionary tendencies were shown by German bonds. The Young and Dawes plan loans were off more than a point each. Elsewhere on the foreign section trends were mixed.

Continental Can Company Votes Dividend

Woolworth Board Declares Usual 60-Cent Return on Capital Stock.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Directors of the Continental Can Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock, payable August 15 to stock of record July 25.

The F. W. Woolworth Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of 60 cents on the capital stock, payable September 1 to stock of record August 10.

Allegheny Steel Co. directors declared a dividend of 15 cents on the common stock, payable August 15 to stock of record August 1. This is the first disbursement since December, 1931, when 5 cents was paid.

Net profit of Transue & Williams Steel Forging Co. for the second quarter ended June 30, totaled $9,806 after charges, equal to 7 cents a share, compared with a loss of $16,541 in the preceding quarter and loss of $23,491 in the second quarter of 1933.

The United Corporation of Delaware reports for the quarter ended June 30, net income of $2,534,614 after interest and other fixed charges, equal after preferred dividends to 4 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with $2,540,047, or 5 cents a share on the common in the second quarter of 1933.

At a meeting of directors the resignation from the board was announced of Philip G. Gossler, president of Columbia Gas & Electric Co.; Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, and John E. Zimmerman, president of United Gas Improvement Co.

Associated Gas & Electric Co. today released its preliminary condensed report for the year ended December 31, 1933. Total operating revenues were $81,331,301, of which $75,114,522, or 92 per cent, was derived from sales of electricity and gas. Although unit sales of electricity and gas during 1933 were 5 per cent and 1.7 per cent, respectively, above 1932, gross operating revenues in 1933 were 4.1 per cent below the previous year. Operating expenses and taxes totaled $55,525,552, leaving operating income of $25,805,748. Deductions from income for interest and preferred stock dividends of subsidiaries, as well as amortization, left a balance remaining of $8,149,380. Fixed interest requirements of Associated Gas & Electric Co. amounted to $11,397,504, which left a deficit for the year of $3,248,124.

Cotton Climbs To New Highs For Season

July Sells at 12.79 as General Market Rises 33 to 36 Points.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Rallies of more than $1.50 per bale carried cotton prices up to new highs for the season and to the highest levels since August, 1930, today, on active commission house and trade buying promoted by continued dryness in west Texas and aided by strength of grains.

All positions from October forward advanced to or beyond the 13-cent level. October sold up from 12.66 to 13.00 and closed at 12.98, with the general market closing firm at net gains of 33 to 36 points.

The market opened steady at 1 to 4 points advance and overnight profit-taking orders were readily absorbed on a broad demand from foreign, Wall street, commission house and trade sources. The strong opening of the wheat market, followed by publication of the weekly weather and crop bulletin, which was regarded as confirming to some extent to the private advices of unfavorable Texas growing conditions, brought in renewed demand.

Realizing Is Absorbed.

While realizing orders came into the market they were readily taken on slight reactions and prices advanced to new highs for the day in the last few minutes of trading. July sold up from 12.49 to 12.80 and December from 12.81 to 13.15 with final prices only a point or so off from the best.

The detailed weather reports for Texas showed somewhat more general showers along the Gulf Coast, but otherwise they were confined to light precipitation at scattered points. While the forecast called for fair to partly cloudy conditions in west Texas, the possibility of local showers in the Rio Grande Valley and the east Texas coast combined with unsettled conditions in Oklahoma appeared to create a little uncertainty over the outlook.

Exports today 6,622, making 7,461,393 so far this season. Port receipts, 5,908; United States port stocks, 2,517,513.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was strong and at new season's highs today on increased coverings and commission-house buying. Final prices were at about the best of the session and from 19 to 25 points net higher. Sales were 163 contracts, including 62 exchanges from September to January at 30 points difference. The census report will be issued tomorrow at 11 a. m. Bleachable spot nominal; July closed 6.15, September, 6.20; October, 6.27; December, 6.45; January, 6.50.

Oil Royalties Now Subject To Regulation

The Better Business Bureau today called attention to regulations recently issued by the Federal Trade Commission covering the offering and sale of oil royalties as investments. Under the newly enacted Federal securities law this type of security was specifically included within the provisions of Government supervision and regulation, and these regulations became effective July 1.

In commenting on the regulations, Louis Rothschild, director of the Better Business Bureau, called attention to the fact that upon the passage of the Federal securities law many questionable stock promoters went into oil royalty offerings because such securities were then considered not to be within Government control. Because of this, reputable dealers in oil royalties welcomed the addition to the law and the new regulations.

Under the new regulations, with certain technical exceptions, facts concerning oil royalties offered to the people in Washington must be filed with the Federal commission. This filing does not constitute approval or an opinion as to the value of the royalty interest, Rothschild pointed out, calling particular attention to the following announcement by the Federal Trade Commission:

"An investment in oil or gas royalty differs in character from most other types of investment. Payments received by the royalty owner are to a large extent simply return of capital investment and can be regarded as income only after deduction has been made for depletion."

Washington Accountants Among Leading Groups

At the fifteenth annual Cost Conference of the National Association of Cost Accountants held in Cleveland, recently, the Washington Chapter was awarded fourth place banner for its standing among the forty-five chapters of the Association. The leading chapters for the year were Erie, Boston, Cleveland, Washington, Philadelphia, Bridgeport, Dayton, New York, Reading, and Louisville, in the order named. Erie chapter was the recipient of the Stephenson Trophy, which is awarded annually to the chapter showing the most progress.

A. B. Gunnarson, president of the local chapter, was elected to the National board of directors of the association, to serve for three years.

Shipments Increase.

New York, July 11 (AP).—Shipments of Cutler Hammer, Inc., for the three months ended June 30 totaled $1,497,490, which compares with $1,175,774 in the preceding three months and $630,325 in the June quarter last year.

Big Companies Lead Nation in Making Profits

Harvard Study Analyzes Incomes by Size of Corporation.

Cambridge, Mass., July 11—In a new research study released by the Harvard Business School, Prof. W. L. Crum subjects the most recent statistics of income, published by the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue on the basis of the annual corporation income tax reports for 1931, to an analysis which contrasts the relative profit showings of large and small corporations for that year and indicates that the larger companies, on the whole, had more satisfactory earnings than the smaller companies.

Particular interest attaches to this study because heretofore it has not been possible to classify corporation incomes or deficits in the United States according to any satisfactory measure of size of firm.

The form in which the Bureau of Internal Revenue published the statistics of income for 1931, however, permitted the classification of corporations according to their total assets, which may be taken as a fair measure of size.

Figures Most Recent.

These figures, therefore, not only are the most recent ones available, but are in fact the only ones which make possible the sort of analysis which Prof. Crum has carried out. His study, published as No. 8 in the series of business research studies of the division of research of the Harvard Business School, is the first comprehensive analysis of the effect of size on corporate earnings and condition in the United States.

The investigation shows a significant tendency for larger corporations to have higher return on their gross business than smaller corporations; for larger corporations to have a smaller rate of loss on their net worth, in a year of deep depression like 1931, than smaller corporations.

These principal findings are in part supported and explained by certain subordinate general findings: the volume of sales in terms of net worth is larger for small corporations than for large corporations, in most lines of industry; the volume of sales in terms of capital assets is larger for small corporations than for large, but the difference is not so striking as that previously mentioned; the current position of the larger companies in most divisions is distinctly stronger than that of smaller companies; the ratio of sales to inventory was in 1931 much higher for smaller companies than for larger companies, except chiefly in the trade division.

Data in Study.

This study embraces balance sheet and income data for 381,088 corporations for the year 1931. Figures are shown separately for the following divisions: Manufacture, trade, mining, construction, agriculture, public utilities, finance and service, and data for the manufacture division are subdivided into 11 groups, as follows: Metals, foods, chemicals, textiles, printing, forest products, paper, tobacco, leather, stone and rubber.

For each of these divisions and groups the information is subdivided into 9 size classes, ranging from corporations with total assets under $50,000 to corporations with total assets of $50,000,000 and over.

In each division and group, furthermore, figures are shown separately for the corporations reporting income for 1931 and for those reporting no income.

Body of W. L. Meeks Brought to Virginia

Charlottesville, Va., July 11.—The body of W. L. Meeks, 50, former resident of Charlottesville, who died at his home in Washington, was brought here yesterday and the interment held in Oakwood Cemetery, the service being conducted by Dr. Henry Alford Porter, of the First Baptist Church.

Mr. Meeks was a native of this city, son of the late William Lewis Meeks. He was married to Miss Fannie Martin, of Albemarle, who survives with five children. He also leaves three brothers, L. T. and E. H. Meeks, of this city, and H. E. Meeks, of Clifton Forge.

Rev. Ham Plans to Aid Danville Dry Forces

Danville, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—The Rev. M. F. Ham, evangelist of Oklahoma City, today wired the local dry strategy board that he would come here direct and address a mass meeting of voters Monday night against a dispensary. Danville votes on the local option question on the next day. The meeting will be held in the city auditorium. The Rev. Ham has held two missions here in recent years.

Fourteen Danville ministers and laymen will speak against a dispensary at two church meetings tomorrow night.

M. P. Gleason's Rites Are Held in Virginia

Lynchburg, Va., July 11.—Funeral services for M. P. Gleason, 58, were held today at Jonesboro Baptist Church, Nelson County, and burial took place in the church yard. Masons had charge of the service.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. James Meeks Gleason; three sons, R. W. Gleason, of Roanoke; R. E. Gleason, of Roanoke, and T. A. Gleason, of Seaford, Del., and two daughters, Mrs. H. E. Powell, of Massies Mill, and Miss Elizabeth Gleason, of Roseland.

Vaccination of Dogs In W. Va. Proposed

Charleston, W. Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Vaccination of all dogs in West Virginia against rabies today was urged by Dr. A. E. McClure, State health commissioner, in an address at the closing session of the State public health council.

"If a dog is worth having, the owner should be willing to pay a small fee for that service," he declared.

49 Enlist in Army.

Bristol, Va., July 11 (Spl.).—Forty-nine applicants for Regular U. S. Army service enlisted through the local recruiting office during June, Sergt. John Grado reported today. The enlistments pushed Bristol's total for the year to 248.

Carter Barron, Loew Manager Here, Moves Up

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Carter Tait Barron, for the past two years city manager of the Loew interests in Washington, yesterday was officially notified by Joseph R. Vogel, general manager of all Loew theaters in the United States, of his promotion to the managership of Loew's Eastern Division, succeeding Col. Harry E. Long.

CARTER BARRON.

Loew's Eastern Division embraces Washington, Baltimore, Norfolk, Richmond, Harrisonburg, and Reading, Pa., with a total of 13 operating theaters.

The elevation of Carter Barron to the post of Division Manager is part of a general Loew advancement of veteran executives involving four territories. In the shifts announced by the New York office yesterday, Col Harry E. Long, a well-known and popular figure in Washington, whom Mr. Barron replaces, moves up to the managership of the Cleveland Division. H. M. Addison, formerly manager of the Cleveland Division, supplants H. M. Downs in the Boston Division and Mr. Downs moves in to the executive offices of Loew's, Inc., in New York City.

Rapid Advancement.

Our good friend Carter Barron's advancement in "show business" has been rapid and well earned. Graduating from the Georgia Institute of Technology in 1927, he entered the theatrical field as manager of a small theater in the suburbs of Atlanta, Ga. Shortly afterward, he won a promotion to the managership of a de luxe house, as the more ornate temples of the titillating tintypes are usually denominated.

Cognizant of the effectiveness of his indefatigability in coaxing patrons to his box office, the Loew organization appointed him manager of Loew's Capitol Theater in Atlanta in 1929. In 1930, when Loew's acquired the sumptuous Fox Theater in Atlanta, it was Barron who was selected to act as its managing head.

Early in 1932 his record of achievement in Atlanta brought him the coveted assignment to the city managership of the Loew interests in the National Capital. It was shortly after his assumption of his new duties in this city that Loew's, Inc., took over the operation of the Fox Theater here, one of the most beautiful and most capacious in the country.

Mr. Barron has made a completely black-ink success of the Fox, at the same time maintaining the profitable status of both Loew's Palace and Columbia.

Native of Clarksville, Ga.

Mr. Barron, if we are not speaking out of turn or telling tales out of school, is 29 years of age and a native of Clarksville, Ga., where he was called last week-end by the lamented death of a sister.

At Georgia Tech, like other Barrons who had preceded him at this institution of higher learning, Carter was an outstanding athlete, winning his letter in football, baseball, track and basket ball. He was nominated on many all-American line-ups for his prowess on the gridiron. He is a member of the National Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

In Washington he has been prominent in the activities of the Motion Picture Code Authority, serving as a member of the local grievance committee. He also is one of the founders and officers of the newly organized Variety Club of Washington, Tent No. 11, of the National body, which held its elaborate induction of officers and house warming in the Willard last Saturday night.

School-Day Romance.

Six years ago Mr. Barron was married to Miss Velna Snelling, of Bostwick, Ga., as the culmination of a school-day romance. Mrs. Barron, "Chic" to her friends, is at present introducting their 6-months-old son, Carter Tait, jr., to the home folks in Georgia.

As division manager, Mr. Barron will continue to make Washington his headquarters. His successor as city manager for Washington has not been announced.

To all of which we wish to add hearty congratulations to a splendid boy and best wishes for a continuation of the fine success he has scored in an eventful seven years in the theater.

Warner Screens Go in for Beauty

Today is the last day it will be possible to view the Baer-Carnera fight pictures at the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier, Md., unless Sidney Lust has decided to prolong the engagement and keep it from the press—which doesn't sound like Sid to me! Capacity audiences have marked the engagement so far. The doors open at 5:30 and the first showing is at 6. The pictures are thereafter shown every hour, on the hour, until closing. The knockdowns are all shown at normal speed and then repeated in slow motion, giving a complete expository close-up of why the British sports writers who insist Carnera won are crazy.

Another "Hot" Band.

One of the "big seven" colored orchestras in the United States will be presented at Chevy Chase Lake tonight by Managers Eddie Carr and Al Stern, when Luis Russell and his "Old Man River" Band will be neard for one night only.

In addition to Russell's virtuosity at the piano, the band features Rex Stewart, considered one of the ace "hot" trumpeters of modern music, and Sonny Woods, said to possess a tenor voice of unusual range and beauty.

Russell's orchestra first came to fame when it was playing at Connie's Inn, in New York, whence it frequently took the air over both N. B. C. and C. B. S. chain radio hook-ups. It comes to Chevy Chase Lake tonight direct from a long engagement at New York's famous Roseland.

The Luis Russell aggregation will be followed at the lake Friday night by Felix Ferdinando, also a widely known radio group.

Arthur Rhodes, director of the "modern comedy" cast of the Roadside Theater, Washington's "barn" theater out on the Rockville Pike at Halpine, Md., whose first production was "The Mad Hopes," by Romney Brent, presented for the first time in Washington last week, has found it impossible to continue his directorial activities further, owing to conflict with other more pressing obligations. The board of directors of the Roadside Theater have accepted his resignation with deep regret and a full consciousness of the value of his services and advice. A successor has not as yet been appointed. The Roadside group's next production will be "Murder in the Red Barn," another old-time melodrama, to be given its premiere on next Tuesday night, July 17, and continued for a five-night run.

Sophie's Swanky Soiree.

The assiduous Miss Paula Gould's weekly enlightenment on the present whereabouts, conduct, triumphs and whatnots of that incorrigible "last of the red-hot mammas," known as Madam Sophie Tucker, is to the effect that Lady Mountbatten, who left London for China last week, gave the smartest farewell party of the season in the Cafe de Paris for Soph's closing at the celebrated London night club.

Among the guests were Noel Coward, Anna May Wong, the Maharajah of Rispiplo, whose nag Soph picked to win the derby recently, and many other friends and admirers.

Mme. Tucker opened next at the Empire Theater, Glasgow, Scotland, and is reputed to have received a thunderous ovation, which seems to imply that the Tucker pulled a Wee & Leventhal and handed out an armful of those trick passes!

The Madam is booked back in Enland in Manchester and Liverpool, then does a week in Schereningen, Holland, then hies her back to England to play a week at the Paramount Theater in Leeds and then another week in London.

There's life in the old gal yet!

Today is the day Master Hardie Meakin, manager of R.K.O.-Keith's Theater, bangs through with a new picture, just to keep the record cock-eyed. The film, as you may recall, is the celluloid rendition of W. Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage," in which Leslie Howard and Bette Davis have the lead roles. Tomorrow night, "Easte Lynne," I hope not!
